City moves on Odello, Spanish Bay projects

THE CITY of Carmel and Monterey County appear ready to settle out of court the legal battle over development on the Odello East ranch (above). Under a proposed compromise to be discussed by the council Tuesday, the city would drop the lawsuit if the county agrees to keep the Odello property within the Carmel Valley Master Plan planning area.

Odello compromise may be worked out

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A POSSIBLE compromise has developed that could settle out of court the legal battle over proposed residential building on the Odello East ranch.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors, after a closed session on Tuesday, appears to have accepted an offer from the city of Carmel to drop the lawsuit if supervisors keep the Odello East ranch within the development limits proposed in the draft Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The Carmel City Council is expected to address the county offer when it meets in a closed session after the regular 4 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 meeting at city hall.

But it appears certain the council will accept the compromise since it is the city that offered to settle out of court through a letter to supervisors written by special counsel Mark Weinberger of San Francisco. Specific details in the letter have not been released.

The Odellos have permissive zoning for approximately 162 units on the family farm about one-half mile south of Rio Road on the east side of Highway 1. The west side will remain artichoke fields.

If the compromise is reached it would be a major victory for the council in its prolonged battle to keep the Odello Ranch development under the jurisdiction of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The Odellos unsuccessfully petitioned Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver to be excluded from the Carmel Valley Master Plan planning area. Silver is the judge who ordered a moratorium on most new building in Carmel Valley until the draft master plan and its accompanying environmental impact report can be reworked to more adequately protect the environment.

Once adopted the master plan will severely restrict the number of new lots of record in Carmel Valley. In the draft plan it is proposed that only 1,181 new lots of record be authorized. The new lots also would be phased in increments over the next 20 years, under an allocation system in the proposed master plan.

Developers also would have to compete for an allocation. Top priority will be granted to those developments that have little adverse impacts on the environment and will have traffic access other than directly off Carmel Valley Road.

The compromise appears to have a good chance of working, according to those who talked with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

"I'm very pleased the county has read our letter and acted on it," Mayor Charlotte Townsend said.

"THIS IS an excellent new opportunity. I personally can't comment, but certainly the council will discuss this at the next possible opportunity," she continued.

"This demonstrates the good communication we now have between the board of supervisors and the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea," the mayor added.

Councilman David Maradei said, "It's something the city has been seeking all along."

Maradei hopes the proposed Odello compromise is just an example of future cooperation between the city and county.

"There are major planning issues coming up in the county. The city and county will have to work together," he said.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who represents Carmel Valley, is confident that the compromise will work.

"We can continue this more appropriately by discussion rather than lawsuit," she said. "I know the Odellos will cooperate and I know the city will cooperate."

"I think we can talk it out. It will not be an easy matter to resolve and it won't happen overnight, but it can be resolved," Strasser Kauffman believes.

She supports including the Odello property in the master plan. "That's an appropriate way to review the project," she said.

However, Strasser Kauffman did say that she would like to give the Odellos some kind of density bonus or higher priority in the allocation system in return for flood protection measures.

Council to take Pebble Beach Co. to state Supreme Court over resort

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council next week will petition the state Supreme Court to block development of the proposed Spanish Bay resort in Del Monte Forest.

The council will announce its decision during the regular meeting of 4 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 at city hall.

The city of Monterey is a party in the lawsuit but that council is yet to decide whether to join Carmel in the appeal. Monterey County Superior Court Judge Robert O'Farrell last summer had rejected city attempts to block the proposed 270-room, 80-condominium and golf course complex.

However, the city has 60 days from when the final decision is filed to appeal. O'Farrell apparently has not formally filed his decision so the city did not exhaust the deadline for appeals.

Special city counsel Alexander Henson has chosen to file the appeal directly to the California Supreme Court because of its potential precedence throughout the state.

Henson told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Wednesday that he will file the petition on Wednesday, Jan. 15. It will take the court about three weeks to decide whether to review the city appeal.

If the state Supreme Court does hear the appeal the city is expected to file an injunction to halt further work on the development.

"If our case is accepted then we'll seek an injunction," Councilman David Maradei said.

The city will base most of its argument on the claim that the circulation element of the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan does not adequately address the traffic impacts on Highway 68, which Caltrans has listed as being at capacity.

If the court agrees with the city's contention, then the Spanish Bay use permit could be overturned because its development rights were granted by a legally inadequate plan.

The city also contends that Spanish Bay traffic will tie up the only artery to the hospital. Pebble Beach Co. responds that improvements at the hospital intersection and a new light on Highway 68 near Haul Road will alleviate any traffic impacts.

One of O'Farrell's key arguments when he ruled against the city is that Carmel failed to exhaust its administrative remedies when supervisors reviewed the Spanish Bay resort use permit.

THE CITY at the time chose not to spend staff time fighting the use permit because it appeared to be a lost cause with former pro-development Supervisors Bill Peters and Michal Moore in charge.

Supervisors approved the use permit for Spanish Bay only days before Peters and Moore left office.

Henson contends that the "overwhelming public interest" in the project outweighs any tactical errors the city may have made in not exhausting its administrative remedies.

The council actually chose to file the appeal at its Dec. 17 meeting, but withheld any public announcement until the city of Monterey could be notified and a strategy developed.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend explained, "There was a great deal of discussion and a great deal of soul searching."

"We felt we should exhaust every legal remedy before giving up...It's the future of the city and the future of the Monterey Peninsula," she said.

Maradei has been one of the more vocal opponents of the Spanish Bay resort project. He calls the suit one of "statewide significance" that would establish a precedence of developer responsibility to protect the well-being of the community.

"Essentially I'm trying to look at the larger picture...At stake as far as I'm concerned is the quality of life on the Monterey Peninsula."

"If one major development is allowed to come in and prepare an inadequate environmental impact report and is allowed to ignore the consequences on the residents then we must take action to protect ourselves," Maradei said.

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my continuing disappointment that Councilman Stephenson and Councilwoman Arnold appear determined to expressly disregard the views of a majority of Carmel residents and voters and argue in favor of building a completely new library complex at Sunset Center.

I have read with great dismay the proposal put forth by Councilman Stephenson and supported by Councilwoman Arnold that we "need" a completely new library which can satisfy the long-term needs of Carmel. In fact, this proposal has been consistently rejected by Carmel voters and residents, and in fact recent studies indicate that a majority of the library users are not even Carmel residents, and yet it is the residents of our community who would be asked to bear the enormous burdens (financial and otherwise) associated with such a large project.

We should all remember that our community is a small one, and that large structures (public or private) are out of character with the community, and should not be considered when other choices which are less intrusive and available, and in fact are favored by the residents. The mere fact that a proposed development is a public project should not exempt it from existing density and design standards. I am sure we can all guess what the reaction of the city would be if a private developer proposed a commercial development at Sunset Center of the same size as the proposed library complex.

Much of the confusion over the library matter could be solved if our elected officials simply followed the advice of the residents and our existing General Plan. The General Plan Committee concluded in 1984 that building a detached annex on the three city owned lots at Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue was the appropriate solution to the library space problem, and I certainly agree with that conclusion.

I can also recall the council indicating that they desired to have input from the residents on this issue; what disturbs me is that when the public comments they receive do not agree with the views of the certain individual members of the council, the public comments are ignored. This is an outrageous situation which apparently can only be corrected at the upcoming elections in April.

We elect public officials to carry out the desires of their constituents, and not to exercise their individual judgment to the exclusion of other points of view. We need to remind all of our elected officials of this important pillar of American government.

Federalizing Big Sur

Dear Editor:

Federalization of the Big Sur coast is with us again in the form of new director of National Parks, William Penn Mott, who proclaims his great desire to make a national parkway status of Highway 1 from Carmel to Morro Bay.

I went to Washington D.C. in 1980 to lobby against federalization of the Big Sur coast and at that time the Government Accounting Office (GAO) was yelling, "no, no, no," and still is, to the overspending of federal funds to acquire private lands.

It is sharply critical of park service acquisition policies, management practices and administrative procedures. In fact the GAO has nothing good to say about the policies of the parks service and, in fact, it has not developed any criteria to decide when and what kind of land to buy.

Besides, would you want this same park service which has mismanaged Yosemite, Yellowstone and the Blue Ridge Parkway, to manage our Highway 1 as a national parkway from Carmel to Morro Bay?

Do you want the park service running your life? Don't let this happen.

Only game in town

Dear Editor:

If this community seriously wishes to use reclaimed sewage water for golf course irrigation it should support the proposal of the Pebble Beach Community Services District to construct the required facilities. The completion of this project is the only way such reclamation will be accomplished in that area for many years.

The cost of the proposed project would not be borne by us taxpayers. Thus it cannot be rejected by us in a required election. The private sector will bear the costs and hope to recover them through fees and sales.

Some of our local politicians oppose this project on the grounds that there may be a better alternative. This is the same tactic they have used for years to stall any improvement in our perilous water supply deficiency.

There is no better feasible alternative for this proposed reclamation. We taxpayers will not vote to squander $14 million for the alleged alternative. That is the Carmel Sanitary District's aborted project which failed because federal funding was withdrawn when it was found the project was neither needed nor cost effective. The CSD's proposed project provides no demonstrable environmental benefit, provides no long-term expansion of our drought reserve, and will do nothing to protect the Carmel River and the steelhead fishery we are now destroying. Why should we taxpayers waste money by funding it?

Our money will be put to better use by funding the dam which will convert to beneficial use the 30 or 40 thousand acre feet of Carmel River water we now waste to the ocean in the average year.

If the community wishes to see golf courses irrigated with reclaimed sewage it should persuade the politicians to get out of the way and let it happen. The PBSCD's proposal is the only feasible reclamation game in town.

Nature on the run

Dear Editor:

This is 1985 and nature is on the run as Deukmejian's administration uses its bureaucratic influence to brainwash and manipulate the voters in California to believe in his double-talk. Now we have ecologists working for the developers who support developing hotels and landscaping the coastal sand dunes. We also have marine biologists who claim that oil drilling on the coast improves the environment for marine life.

Deukmejian's administration has every intention of allowing every hotel developer to build hotels all over the coastline, on public land as well as on private land. The publicly owned coastline on Cannery Row is an example of what we can expect. The California Coastal Commission was a joke on the voters from its inception in 1972.

Many contemporary ecologists have deter-

This is justice???

SOMETHING IS terribly wrong here.

I'm obviously under the mistaken impression that jury duty is not only supposed to be a duty for all American citizens, but a right and privilege in this, a free and democratic society. That's what it's supposed to be, but we're a far cry from that — at least in the County of Monterey, I can't speak for other areas of our country.

Let me give you an example. When somebody mentions that they've been called for jury duty, what's their (and your) first reaction? Mild disgust, annoyance, some grumbling, exasperation, usually followed by a few choice words which don't exactly uphold our Founding Fathers' ideals of jury duty as provided for in the sixth and seventh amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

All that is also followed by sympathy for the poor schnook and relief that you're not the one that has to go.

Why would this so-called "cornerstone of the American judicial system" cause people to scramble for excuses and undiagnosable diseases and comedians to quip: "I wouldn't want my fate in the hands of 12 people who weren't smart enough to get out of jury duty"? Witty, but unfortunately too true these days.

That's because not only are there very few incentives to want to serve on a jury (besides the fact that you're gung-ho patriotic and duty-bound and wouldn't want to see our democratic society crumble in front of your eyes because of lack of participation), there's a whole roomful of disadvantages, even if you did want to serve on a jury.

For one — as the clerk at the county office told me — employment is no excuse. "If employment problems could excuse you from jury duty, then nobody would be here," she snapped. Thank you, at least now I know I'm not the only one who's concerned about his job.

What this means is that it doesn't matter what you do or who you are, or what hardships you have to endure, ya gotta serve. Which is good in theory, but it doesn't really make for jurors with the right attitude.

mined that hotels, asphalt, concrete and golf courses are "good" for the coastal sand dunes at Spanish Bay, but our feet destroy the fragile dunes sand. These "ecologists" work for these developers and they are easily persuaded to offer testimony in support of the developers. It's a coincidence that these hotel developers happen to be the same oil industrialists who want to drill for oil on this coastline.

This is 1986 and hotels and oil drilling are now "good" for our environment. But now it is a criminal act to walk on the sand and on the earth because the developers and the ecologists don't like our footprints.

Then there's the waiting, oh I admit, a small price to pay for freedom, but why wait to be told two hours later that you can go home, to come back tomorrow...to wait some more...to be told to come back in three hours. Once in court there's even more waiting.

Then there are the interminable questions from a phalanx of lawyers, all apparently intent on finding out whether you're on their side, or the other side. You can consider yourself lucky if they don't ask you what your mother's father's political affiliation is.

And there's the money. Of course if we really consider it our patriotic duty we wouldn't accept money. But the judge gets paid handsomely, the lawyers — you can be sure — are getting their money's worth, and everyone else, from the bailiff to the court stenographer are getting paid a healthy salary. The jurors — well, since it's their duty — get a whopping $10 a day plus mileage (15 cents a mile). But who's complaining?

(Legally your employer cannot fire you for serving jury duty; but then again he doesn't have to pay you for the days you miss either. If you own your own business or work for a small business, you're probably out of luck, or as one attorney said, "It's part of paying your dues.")

Ironically this attitude we have about jury duty isn't confined to the "general public" out there. One judge, after seeing that only one prospective juror out of 12 had served on a jury in the past, said to the others, "You've been lucky." Up until now at least.

Why is this attitude so pervasive in our society? Because it's virtually all true; horror stories about jury duty get passed along faster than a cold in a crowded office.

There's no question that our system of justice has come under attack in recent years, including the jury system. There's a definite need for an overhaul or at the very least a streamlining of our system. The question is, when do we start?

Meanwhile, shut up and pay your dues.

Mayor will run

CARMEL MAYOR Charlotte Townsend will seek a third term, she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Wednesday morning.

Mayor Townsend said she will take out nomination papers today, Jan. 9. The election is April 8.

"The city has either begun or completed a number of major projects in 1985. Believing that the necessary momentum is present to move on other important needs, such as library expansion and parking, my hope is to continue to be an active part of the process," she said.

Residents' health, safety a concern

City could halt proposed PBCSD sewage plant

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council has quietly completed a tactical maneuver that could stop development of the proposed wastewater reclamation facility in Del Monte Forest.

A council-adopted ordinance that went into effect Jan. 1 requires that public agencies using Carmel streets for utilities and pipes must obtain a city use permit. Agencies with existing pipes 12 inches or more in diameter must obtain a permit within one year.

The Pebble Beach Community Services District (PBCSD) owns a 27-inch pipe that carries sewage from Del Monte Forest through the city on its way to the Carmel Sanitary District plant south of Rio Road where the effluent is treated and disposed.

The Pebble Beach district plans to build a wastewater treatment plant at Sawmill Gulch in Del Monte Forest. The plant will treat the liquid sewage and sell it to Pebble Beach golf courses for irrigation purposes.

However, the solid sewage or sludge must still be transported through the pipes to the Carmel Sanitary District (CSD) plant.

The solid sludge is then treated by a special digester machine before being disposed of at the Marina landfill, according to CSD General Manager Michael Zambory.

Liquid effluent poses few problems, but solid sludge by itself in a pipeline through Carmel streets may be a significant health and environmental risk, the city believes.

With that in mind, the new ordinance gives the city an option to deny the transportation of solid sludge through pipes under city streets.

If the city denies the permit then the Pebble Beach Community Services District would have to build an expensive digester facility for the sludge or abandon its plans for the wastewater treatment facility.

Zambory agrees that the transportation of concentrated sludge may pose problems in the city.

"It's the most horrible part of sewage" including "pesticides," Zambory said.

Sludge "absolutely, no question about it" is more of an environmental and health risk than daily raw sewage, he said.

The smell also is a problem.

"The concentrated sludge is a lot worse than raw sewage because it has a tendency to become septic," Zambory said. "If it becomes septic you don't want it to be anywhere near your nose."

The city ordinance also has caused the Coastal Commission staff to rethink recommended conditions of approval should the commission grant a use permit for the wastewater treatment plant.

One possible new condition for approval is that Pebble Beach Community Services District obtain a city use permit for the sludge transportation before it could construct the wastewater treatment facility.

The staff also has under consideration the suggestions advanced in a special informational workshop Friday, Jan. 3 arranged by Assemblyman Sam Farr of Carmel.

Those in attendance represented the cities of Carmel and Pacific Grove, Monterey County, Carmel Sanitary District, Pebble Beach Community Services District, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and the Del Monte Park neighborhood in Pacific Grove, which is adjacent to Sawmill Gulch.

THE COASTAL Commission is to consider the PBCSD application for a wastewater treatment facility use permit when it meets today, Jan. 9, in San Francisco.

The city of Carmel, Carmel Sanitary District and water district are embroiled in a lawsuit with the PBCSD that seeks to block development of the wastewater treatment facility. Carmel Sanitary District has its own plans, but no financing, for a larger facility to be built on CSD property.

The three agencies want to complete extensive studies on the economic impacts of both projects, plus the feasibility of a larger CSD facility, before the Pebble Beach district is able to develop its wastewater treatment plant.

Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend, in a statement related to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, said:

"The city council intends to protect the individual property owners who reside along streets which are subject to impacts generated by other agencies. These impacts can be detrimental to the health, safety, welfare and property values of the residents and the city. This ordinance and the full exercising of the city's proprietary ownership rights is a statement to all other public agencies that Carmel-by-the-Sea intends to remain master of its own house.

"We will not be a doormat for others whose pursuit of their own projects, however important, are potentially harmful to our residents and their properties," the mayor continued.

Mayor Townsend's statement stressed that the ordinance does not mean that all projects will be denied. However, it also admits that its focus is the Pebble Beach facility.

"This ordinance, as well as the city's ownership rights, does not mean that all proposals will be denied. It does state that projects must be in the best interests of our residents, their property and the city's land holdings and will be scrutinized under the most stringent standards," the mayor stated.

"While not exclusively directed at any one agency, the ordinance and the city's exercising its proprietary rights of ownership place another hurdle before the Pebble Beach Community Services District and its efforts to construct a wastewater treatment and disposal project in Del Monte Forest and transport the concentrated sludge through Carmel..."

The mayor's statement also chastized the PBCSD Board of Directors for its refusal to cooperate with other public agencies and residents of the Del Monte Park neighborhood in Pacific Grove.

"PBCSD has continually turned its back on the public interests of the entire peninsula in support of this project," she said.

Council to tackle library annex issue...again

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL City Council faces the rather awkward task of overruling the planning commission if there is ever to be an annex for Harrison Memorial Library.

The council Jan. 14 is expected to determine whether a proposed annex and underground parking garage on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue conforms with the goals and policies of the Carmel General Plan.

The planning commission in December unanimously determined that the facility does not conform to the general plan.

If the annex and parking garage facility is to be developed then the council must overrule the planning commission and establish findings that the project is indeed in conformance with the goals and policies of the general plan.

The conformance issue is just another in a long line of controversies to erupt over the proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex and underground parking garage.

For at least the past 20 years the city has debated three points: build a new facility at Sunset Center, construct the corner annex, or simply do nothing.

Just about everybody agrees that if the city did not have a library then the Sunset Center facility is the best plan. However, a new library at Sunset Center has twice been the subject of advisory ballots and both times voters overwhelmingly rejected the project.

There is a large and vocal segment of the community which simply does not want to see library services relocated out of the existing building designed by noted architect Bernard Maybeck.

Rather than alter the current building they propose that the city either build an annex or relocate some services to Sunset Center.

And there are those who do not want any changes because half of the patrons reside outside the city limits. They would prefer that the county build a new library at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

For awhile it looked as if the council would settle the issue after a 4-1 vote (Robert Stephenson dissented) in November to proceed with plans for a $750,000, 4,500 sq. ft. annex and $600,000 24-space underground parking garage.

But the plan was immediately assailed and even the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees — although reluctantly approving the scaled-down version — expressed reservations since the proposal is not as large as the originally-planned 8,500 sq. ft. annex.

THEN THE planning commission determined that the smaller annex did not conform with the goals and policies of the general plan.

Two of the commissioners — Chairman Gene Cava and Marjorie Montelius — were swayed because the general plan specifically cites the larger annex.

They reason that the smaller development could not keep with the policies of the general plan if the 8,500 sq. ft. annex is specifically mentioned.

Commissioner Gene Hammond, a former mayor, delivered the most persuasive arguments in favor of a non-compliance vote.

Hammond, who wants the county to build a new library at the mouth of the Valley, argues that the general plan discourages further public facilities in the residential zone. (The three city-owned lots are in the R-1 district.)

The general plan also prohibits commercial parking in the R-1 zone. By using in-lieu fees, which are assessed to developers who can't meet parking requirements, the city is creating a commercial parking lot in the residential district, Hammond said.

Another key argument advanced by Hammond is that the general plan specifically discourages further traffic generators. By building more space for the library the city simply is enticing more usage. More patrons equals more cars in already-congested Carmel, Hammond believes.

Councilman David Maradei, who sees the smaller annex as a compromise between the supporters of the "no building" and "Sunset Center library" concepts, points out that the general plan assumed that an annex would be constructed.

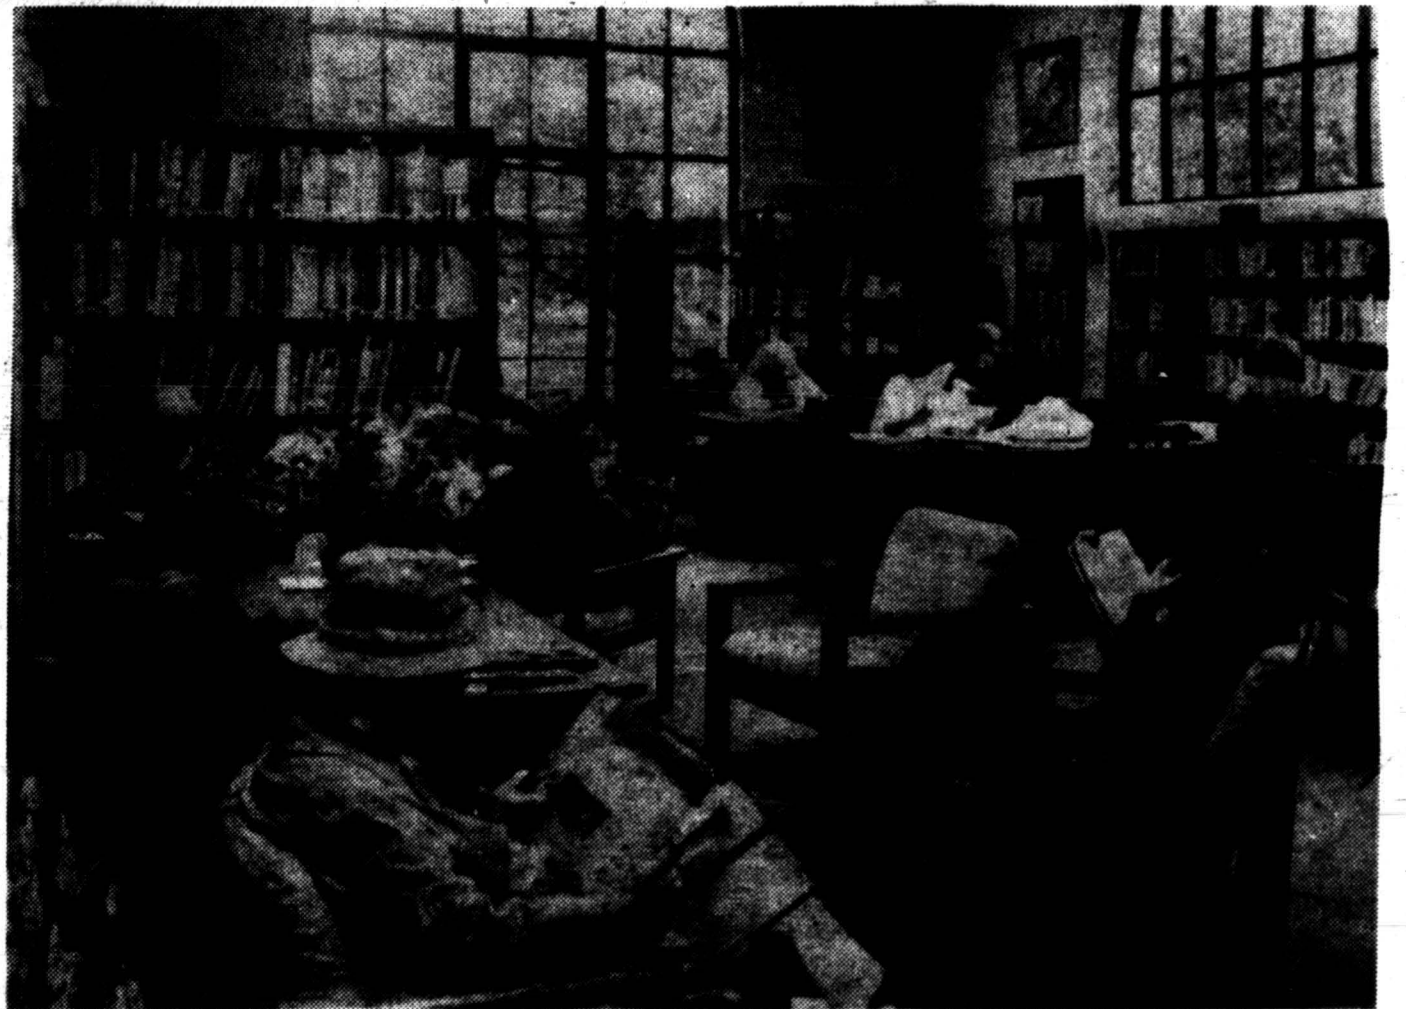

Maradei questioned why the non-conformance issue was not raised by the planning commission when the general plan was recommended for adoption.

"There were several times when the issue could have been raised and wasn't raised," he said.

Maradei sees the latest controversy as a "political move."

"What we're talking about is an attempt to politically control a decision made by the council and library board," Maradei said. "I'm talking about people who want to control a decision already made by the council...I'm not going to name names."

THE QUESTION now is whether there

THE POPULAR Harrison Memorial Library reading room is just one of the reasons why many patrons do not want the city to relocate library services to a new building at Sunset Center. The council on Tuesday, Jan. 14 will continue its quest to build a library annex and parking garage, but controversy refuses to diminish. (Holly McFarland photograph.)

are enough votes on the council to overturn the planning commission's decision. The sentiments seem to be:

• David Maradei: He will probably vote to overrule the commission based on the fact that the general plan already cites the annex as a city project.

• Robert Stephenson: Stephenson continually has opposed the annex plan, preferring a new facility at Sunset Center. There's no reason to doubt he'll change his mind now.

• Mayor Charlotte Townsend: Townsend long has been a supporter of the annex. She no doubt would like to see a larger building but has chastised Stephenson for his refusal to support the annex. It's doubtful the planning commission has changed her mind.

• Helen Arnold: At first a supporter of the annex, Arnold recently wrote a column in this newspaper throwing her support to a new library at Sunset Center while maintaining the existing building as a museum. Hard to say where she stands on the conformance issue. If she is convinced that Sunset Center is the right idea as her column says, look for Arnold to align herself with Stephenson.

• James Wright: A stickler for detail and conformance to city codes and policies, it's hard to predict Wright's position. He has voted to support the smaller annex, but that was before the planning commission sessions. Look for Wright to hold the swing vote and key to the future of the annex.

The library annex issue tops the council meeting at 4 p.m. next Tuesday at city hall. Other items before the council include:

• An appeal from Michael Lajigian of a planning commission decision to deny the sale of ice cream at his Chocolate Dreams store, south side of Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

• An appeal from MacKenzie Patterson of planning commission denial of a plan to relocate rooftop seating to a courtyard for Collage Restaurant, north side of Sixth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

• An appeal from Doney Pavick and Diane Knight of a planning commission decision to deny a use permit to operate a working arts and crafts studio on the east side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

Water board to discuss 'rollcrete' dam

By NANCY HILLS

MID-YEAR budget adjustments, authorization of new projects to complete documentation for the proposed San Clemente Dam and election of new officers are among the agenda items for the Monday, Jan. 13 meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board.

The meeting will convene at 7:30 p.m. at the Monterey City Council Chambers, Colton Hall.

In addition to the regular monthly board meeting, a special workshop will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 16 at the Environmental Health Meeting Room, County Courthouse complex on Agujito Road in Monterey. The workshop is a presentation by Bob Bruce of Morrison-Knudsen Engineers on construction of roller-compacted concrete dams, often referred to as "rollcrete" dams.

The water board is considering the rollcrete dam construction for the proposed San Clemente Dam. Roller-compacted concrete construction, according to Bruce Buel, general manager of the water management district, is a new technology that could save the district both time and money in building the dam.

In the Jan. 13 meeting, the board will review the revenues and expenditures for the first six months of the fiscal year and make any necessary adjustments to the budget. Buel said that revenues are $110,000 greater than expected, while expenditures are "right on target."

The board is expected to use the extra revenues for projects which will expedite the completion of the EIR and other documentation for the proposed dam. These projects include expanding the cumulative impacts section of the EIR to more fully analyze growth impacts, compiling a more detailed topographic map of the proposed dam site, and hiring temporary support staff for project coordination and technical review.

The meeting will also include a presentation of Monterey County's 1985 priority distribution of water allocation for the California American Water Company area and a status report on the progress of cities in the water district's jurisdiction to implement internal allocation policies.

The internal allocation policies of cities in the district has caused some concern within the water district, leading some board members to push for a phased allocation plan for the additional water the proposed dam would provide.

Water district Director Dick Heuer in particular has expressed concern that without a plan to phase the allocation of new water supplies, the additional water will be used much too quickly.

Pt. Lobos Ranch plans withdrawn, resubmitted

WITHIN THE space of hours, the developer of the proposed Point Lobos Ranch resort project withdrew his application and then resubmitted plans to the Monterey County Planning Department.

Developer Ted Richter, because a year has elapsed since his initial plans were submitted, faced the options of having supervisors reject the project, ask for a 90-day extension, or voluntarily withdraw plans.

Rejection of the project would mean that Richter would have to wait a year before he could resubmit plans. The 90-day extension would not do him any good because the hydrology studies will take longer than three months.

Thus Richter withdrew at the last minute just as supervisors on Tuesday were considering the project. His architect, Paul Davis, then went over to the planning department and resubmitted plans.

However, supervisors did reject a plea to waive the filing fees and Richter will be saddled with a new bill. Last year the filing fees were approximately $3,700 but the charges since have been increased and it probably cost about $5,500 for Richter to reapply.

Richter is the lead in a partnership that proposes to build a resort at Point Lobos Ranch just across Highway 1 from the state reserve.

The plan is to develop two 120-room hotels, tennis courts, equestrian center, conference center, 42 homes, employee housing and a youth hostel.

- A recommendation from the planning commission not to adopt an ordinance that would allow an extra 5 percent coverage area for those who want to install solar collectors.

- Adopt a resolution opposing oil and gas drilling off the coast of central and northern California.

- Consider a position on the city's sphere of influence as proposed by the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO).

- Consider establishing a trust fund for the acquisition of Mission Ranch Resort and authorizing staff to accept donations into said fund.

- Authorize the city administrator to contact the state Department of Health Services in response to citizens' complaints regarding Cal-Am water quality.

- Authorize staff to send letter to Caltrans regarding information about access from Highway 1 to the proposed Point Lobos Ranch development.

- Designate Monterey County as the administrative agency for the hazardous waste program.

City council race gets underway today

THE CARMEL City Council race officially gets underway today, Jan. 9, and will conclude in 12 weeks with the April 8 election.

Prospective candidates now may obtain nomination papers at city hall and they have until Thursday, Jan. 30 to return the completed nomination papers with the signatures of at least 20 registered voters who reside within the city limits.

The vacant positions now are held by Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilmen David Maradei and Robert Stephenson. All three are expected to seek re-election but have yet to commit themselves.

Another name to surface in the continuing search for council candidates is Don Lampson, a guard at the Correctional Training Facility in Soledad.

The 40-year-old Lampson, a three-and-one-half-year resident of Carmel, said he is a "maybe" candidate.

"I think the poor folk should have a say in what goes on in Carmel," said Lampson, a renter.

Others who seem to lean toward running include former Assistant Police Chief Bob Fischer and Bruce Roberts, a Monterey police officer who lost by only a dozen votes in 1984.

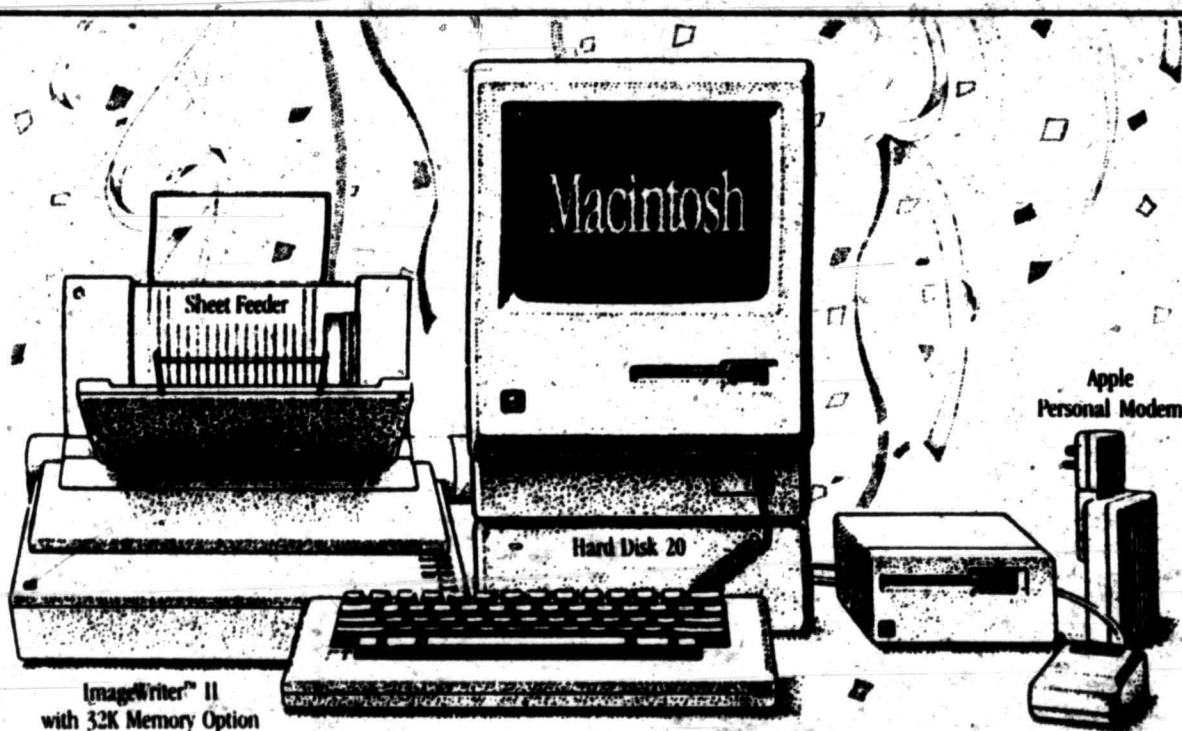

Mayor Townsend, although not yet decided on a re-election bid, said she is concerned about the lack of new candidates for city offices. She ran unopposed in 1984 and thus far no one has come out to challenge her again this year.

"I could take that as a compliment, but I see it as a problem because none of us will be here forever. That's one of the things I've tried to do — bring young people into city government," Mayor Townsend said.

There is a possibility that the nomination period could be extended to Feb. 4.

If either Stephenson or Maradei do not file for re-election the nomination period for council will remain open until Feb. 4.

If Townsend does not file, but both incumbent councilmen do, then the nomination period for mayor is extended while the council nominations are closed.

Harmony key word in county

By KARIN STRASSER KAUFFMAN
Supervisor — Fifth District

Happy New Year! Thank you for the abundant holiday wishes to myself and my family sent by so many constituents. My job of representing you continues to be extremely gratifying — in good part because of your steadfast participation and support on matters large and small, political and personal. I feel fortunate indeed to be surrounded by such attentive constituents. My number one wish for myself in 1986 is that you will continue to let me hear from you. My number one wish for you, in turn, is that I may represent you honestly and effectively.

1986 holds many challenges when it comes to local issues and problems. In the aftermath of the holidays, I have been working on my own wish list for the year ahead. It will require a great deal of work and cooperation on the part of my colleagues on the board of supervisors, as well as on the part of the public.

For the Fifth District, my top priority is to wrest back local control over our unique coastline. Just last Tuesday, the board began the critical process of approving "implementing ordinances" for our county's four local coastal plans. Three of these plans (Del Monte Forest, Carmel and Big Sur) are in the Fifth District. I consider it urgent for us to deal with all four coastal plans as one stretch and to plan regional for coordinated viewshed protection.

Regional planning for traffic improvements is another key goal for me in 1986. By early summer, our City-County Traffic Force, established last year, will be able to evaluate results from a detailed Origin and Destination Study. This will allow us to know how much traffic is from "within" our communities and how much originates from "outside" as we plan our roadways. Undoubtedly we will have to continue to push the state to speed up the construction date for the Hatton Canyon Freeway, a project required now in order to address past growth and its negative effects on public safety.

Further component of traffic planning will be the new Traffic Study commissioned by the county as part of the supplemental Environmental Impact Report for the Carmel Valley Land Use Plan.

This brings me to another item high on my wish list: a duly examined, court-approved and finally-adopted Carmel Valley Master Plan. Very soon now, I will be holding town hall meetings on these supplemental EIR Drafts. Extensive public hearings are scheduled before the planning commission and the full board of supervisors for late spring, with further hearings on the final EIR before both bodies in summer.

The County Planning staff and the consultants have committed themselves to a heavy work load in order to meet the calendar deadline of fall 1986 for final adoption. As the Valley's closest-to-home representative, I recognize the hardships which the

Carmel Business Association

The members of the Carmel Business Association look to 1986 as a year of hope and understanding.

It is our hope that we will have peace and tranquility in our village, with a high morale returning to the people of our area. We hope that our city fathers spend money wisely as these monies have been generated by all of us as Carmel taxpayers, and that spending and investments should be made for the good of the entire village.

Real estate investments should be very carefully considered, in view of the slowdown of the economy. These types of investments, however noble their purpose, could well become a burden on our resident taxpayers if the sales tax and hostelry tax are lessened.

It is the hope of the Carmel Business Association that members of the business community and city hall can make a new commitment to a mutually beneficial relationship that will be a help to Carmel and the business community. We are committed to helping Carmel return to a happy and exciting place to be.

1986 can be the beginning we all want it to be with patience and understanding as the guidelines.

A year of action for area schools

By ROBERT INFELISE
Superintendent

Carmel Unified School District

When asked to take a look at the future of the Carmel Unified School District, one is tempted to drift into a heady fantasy of curriculum innovations, architectural wonders and Socrates-like pedagogues.

Reality is that a superintendent, who is only five months on the job, would be naive to predict what will happen this next year in Carmel Unified School District. There are some hopes and desires that are taking the shape of an action plan that should influence where we are heading, though. In the next year anyone taking a definitive look at the district should find the following:

- Students whose educational experiences and direction are being carefully scrutinized, monitored, and evaluated by a dedicated staff of professionals and classified personnel.

- A day-to-day operational system that is consistent and effective.

- A monitoring system that will evaluate curriculum and modify it, when necessary, to make sure that every student is continued to be challenged to achieve at his or her maximum potential.

- A staff that is accountable for each of their roles.

- An attempt to establish a long-range facilities plan. (If there be anyone who can accurately, with guarantees, predict Carmel's demographic development, please see me for a secure financial future.)

- A building maintenance program that will prevent the community's multi-million dollar capital investment from deteriorating any further.

- Start of plan to recruit the finest teachers available to replace the 30-40 percent of our staff that could be retiring in the next five years.

- A financial program that is an accurate reflection of the Carmel Unified School District's educational program and is fiscally responsible and accountable.

- A community relations program that will accurately and candidly reflect what's happening in our schools.

- A school board that is committed to all of the above, which means policies that provide direction and guidelines for the staff to manage the system so that goals and objectives can be achieved in a stable and creative environment.

One of the great debates that began before his time, but was focused by Rousseau, is the issue raised by the question, "What knowledge is the most worth?" When the decision makers in the public schools attempt to determine what should be taught the students, this question must be addressed. What is important for a student to learn? What has priority? Is geometry more important than music?

Plato advocated "sound mind, sound body" from which has been inferred that physical education must (and has been for years) have equal priority with all other required subjects. And so on. The debate must continue. The role of the schools is to provide stimulus for the discussion and assist the community in reaching consensus on what happens to and for students.

It must be recognized that as our values are modified, the school as an institution in the society will reflect those values (in this writer's opinion, that is a given, not an assumption). But, even with a dynamic of continued change, the community must determine "eternal verities," i.e., those values and personal skills that transcend time and changing environments to ensure that they are a continual part of the school's curriculum. The challenge is to determine, to decide, and stick to it.

1986 will be fascinating, creative, contentious, tedious, fun and rewarding for those who will be a part of the Carmel Unified School District.

Expansion sets tone for 36th year

By RICHARD T. NIMMONS
President, Board of Directors
The Carmel Foundation

As The Carmel Foundation in 1986 begins its 36th year, it looks forward to new ways and opportunities to broaden the social, cultural, avocational and educational horizons of seasoned citizens in the area, some 3,400 of whom are members of the foundation.

The year will see an expansion of the content and variety in the more than 40 classes the foundation offers in subjects ranging from photography to philosophy, and from woodworking to foreign language instruction. It will also see the exercise of the foundation's continuing concern for providing low-cost housing to seniors through its two facilities in Carmel, Haseltine and Trevett Court, and its residential care facility offering homelike care and surroundings for seniors unable to care for themselves.

The foundation this year will invest more than $50,000 in capital improvements to maintain and improve its housing facilities and to broaden its service to members and the community through computerizing many of its operations.

For the future, both in 1986 and beyond, the foundation's board of directors sees a need for low-cost housing for seniors in Carmel. Its demographic and other projections show this need to be both continuing and increasing.

From its own day-to-day experience the foundation believes there is a pressing need for counseling and advisory services to Carmel seniors in a variety of areas, and it will continue to provide these and increase their range and scope as community requirements grow.

One of the great challenges for any organization dealing with the retired citizenry

Plan that have passed include a reduction in the size of the business district and increased control of visitor-oriented shops. Such actions have generated national publicity in recognition of Carmel-by-the-Sea's efforts to retain and improve our unique village atmosphere.

Also "newsworthy" were the regulation of newsracks and water conservation ordinances. Both are pieces of legislation which have aroused much interest in other cities. The water ordinance was the first enacted on the Monterey Peninsula and has been copied by local cities as well. (This is the kind of "renown" that we appreciate!)

In the land use area, possible overcrowding and downgrading of a neighborhood was averted by innovative zoning of the Gamble Estate. We may expect this type of specific plan to be applied to some of the other large parcels remaining in the city.

In the "people" field we have door-to-door taxi service for the infirm and elderly ($15,000), social and cultural grants amounting to approximately $80,000, and plans for senior and handicapped housing, 15 units scheduled for completion in 1986.

Another major project nearing completion which will intrinsically affect young and old, business person and resident, is the second phase of the Beach Restoration. This project was carried out by the Beach Task Force, a group of citizens, city officials and consultants, all of whom deserve much praise for many hours of devoted and inspired work.

Several major projects long planned and too often postponed were completed last year. Among them, Piccadilly Park, remodeling of City Hall, the senior housing already mentioned and renovation of Sunset Center stand out. Also plans for public restrooms in Devendorf Park. And, computerization of City Hall, the Harrison

Pivotal year for city of Carmel

By CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

Obviously we must look back in order to evaluate what is to come, and in retrospect, 1985 was a year of action. Even a brief look at the number and variety of things accomplished in 1985 is both astonishing and gratifying. That both major and minor actions took place with a minimum a publicity or controversy is also a matter of pride.

Most important in the past year, as well as promising to be most important in years to come for the city, was implementation of the 1984 General Plan. As we know, the plan's goals and objectives provide a framework for both short-term decisions and long-term action. It is gratifying indeed to find this city now producing action, rather than re-action, or "knee-jerk" after-the-fact legislation.

Ordinances which implement the General

Water quality a concern for 1986

By WALTER WONG
Chief of Environmental Health
County of Monterey

The efforts started in 1985 to protect Monterey Peninsula drinking water supply from contamination will continue. We completed a comprehensive study of the septic tank systems in the Carmel Valley Village and Robles Del Rio area in November 1985. This study showed 68 percent of the septic tank systems were a public health problem.

The Central Coast Regional Water Quality Control Board and the State Water Resources Control Board recognized this problem and gave this area a high priority rating of 44 for a Pollution Study Grant in 1986. The Clean Water Bond Law of 1984 provides for grants of up to 97½ percent of the costs of conducting pollution studies. The purpose of a pollution study is to document either the existence or absence of a suspected public health hazard or water quality problem. Projects will be considered for further Clean Water Grant funding if the results of the study document a problem.

On Dec. 11, 1985, a representative of the State Water Resources Control Board spent the entire day reviewing Monterey County's Environmental Health Study of the septic tank systems of Carmel Valley Village and Robles Del Rio area. The State Board Reviewer also made a field trip into this area.

It was the findings of this State Water Resources Control Board representative that the Monterey County Septic Tank Study was very comprehensive and complied with all state standards on pollution studies. Thus our local study had accomplished a large portion of the Clean Water Grant Pollution Study and the only remaining task to be accomplished in 1986 is the Hydrology/Geology study of this area as well as ground and surface water testing. The deadline for submitting application forms for 97½ percent cost for this task is Jan. 31, 1986.

The general public has expressed concern about toxic chemical contamination. The environmental health department will continue to enforce laws on underground hazardous material storage tanks to make sure they do not leak and contaminate the groundwater.

Efforts will be made to educate the public not to dispose of household toxic waste into their domestic garbage. These toxic materials end up contaminating groundwater at the garbage landfills. One day in 1986 will be provided by the Monterey Peninsula Garbage District to allow residents in the Monterey Peninsula to dispose of their household toxic waste in an approved location.

In 1986, the environmental health department intends to test small water systems (five to 199 connections) for toxic chemicals. This was made possible through a $147,000 grant under AB 1803.

Monterey Peninsula residents have always been very active in preserving its beautiful environment and 1986 will probably see this continued enthusiasm.

1986 to be a year of controversy

By ASSEMBLYMAN SAM FARR
California Legislature

1986 is probably going to be a controversial year.

If you do not like controversy, step aside. But if you are interested in taking an active role in society's trouble spots, this will be a good year. I am looking forward to it.

Probably one of the most significant areas of controversy will be finance. Once again, we are looking at the strong possibility of problems in financing the operations of state government.

Congress has passed the Gramm-Rudman budget act which will require mandatory cuts in next year's budget. Undoubtedly, the President and Congress will be looking to cut federal funds shared with the states. It is estimated California's share in federal budget cuts could be as high as $800 million.

Adding to financial woes is a slight slowdown in the California economy. The revenues coming to the state coffers are not as high as were projected.

Combined with some tax reform measures, it is highly conceivable that the Legislature could be forced to prepare a budget with over $1 billion less in revenue. Given the increasing demands on the state to deal with the multi-million-dollar toxic waste problems, a highway system in need of repair, and a virtually broke education system, such a budget will be difficult to craft.

Another major area of controversy will be our pristine coastline. Recently, because of efforts by the governor, the moratorium on offshore oil drilling was lifted. During the

America faces a year of decision

Rep. LEON E. PANETTA
U.S. Congress
16th Congressional District

In 1985, Congress and the President deferred judgment on several crucial issues facing the nation and those of us living along the Monterey coast. In each of these areas, 1986 may be a year of decision.

ARMS CONTROL. Americans were heartened to see President Reagan meet for the first time with the Soviet leader. But the Reagan-Gorbachev summit only opened the door. The work of hammering out an arms agreement still remains. Success will come only if there is a genuine commitment to the peace process. There are mixed views in the Administration on arms control. The outcome will depend on the President. It may be, as some have written, that he believes this issue will determine his place in history. Whatever the motivation, our first resolution for the new year should be to call on the heads of both super-powers to take the lead and make 1986 the year of arms control.

BUDGET. A year ago, Congress and the President seemed determined to attack the $200 billion annual budget deficits facing the country. But both avoided the tough choices. Then, near the end of last year, Congress enacted a bill that will force either strong action to reduce deficits, or create utter chaos.

The Gramm-Rudman bill sets mandatory deficit reduction targets over the next five years, including a balanced budget by 1991. Its impact is unpredictable. If both the President and the Congress work together to adopt a budget that controls defense and entitlement spending and increases revenues, Gramm-Rudman will have been a success. But if both go back to business as usual, the President proposing big defense increases, no additional revenues, and dramatic domestic cuts, and Congress opposing any limits on entitlement spending — then the results will be continued political stalemate and growing deficits.

Competing factions will work to stop Gramm-Rudman from being implemented or to insulate pet defense and domestic programs from automatic cuts. The budget will break down in chaos. The President's 1987 budget, which must be submitted by Feb. 5, will be the first test of leadership in 1986, and the first test of the Gramm-Rudman experiment.

TAX REFORM. As a long-time advocate of tax reform and simplification, I was pleased that the President made this issue a top priority. In the end, the House passed a bill that does only a part of what it should: it does not provide radical tax simplification, and it does not reduce budget deficits. But its strength is that it shifts a good portion of the tax burden from individuals back to corporations and makes the tax code more fair for low- and middle-income taxpayers. The Senate will take up this bill in early 1986, and it may pass by mid-year.

Ideally, the final bill will not only distribute the tax burden more fairly but also provide additional simplification and ment of this program within our municipal organization.

The Carmel City Council has moved deliberately on this program to assure that the public monies are prudently spent. At this writing the programs are returning almost 90 percent of their cost. Last summer's program returned an astonishing 10 percent. The program can pay for itself with proper management. I think you can look for recreation to become an important part of the future of the city. The city is becoming aware that the intangible substance called "community

By MICHAEL ZAMBORY
General Manager/Engineer
Carmel Sanitary District

The new year will see completion of the district's ongoing two-year wastewater treatment facility improvement project. This grant-funded project, costing $6 million, includes facilities which will prevent any further discharge of raw sewage into the Carmel River regardless of the duration of any PG&E power outages or the quantity of rainfall.

In addition, the project adds dechlorination facilities, which will permit the district to discharge secondary-treated wastewater into Carmel Bay with no residual chlorine to injure the biota. The improvements include the addition of diffuser ports on the Carmel Bay outfall pipeline which will greatly increase the diffusion of the secondary-treated wastewater as it mixes with the ocean waters of Carmel Bay.

Also in the project is a dewatering press which will permit the district to dewater the sludge from the treatment process prior to disposing of it at the Marina landfill. Dewatered sludge is less costly to handle and less likely to create disposal problems.

Finally, the project includes standby electrical generation for the collection system pump stations throughout the district. The addition of these generators will guarantee continued raw sewage pump station operation during PG&E outages due to heavy storms. The project was supported by a 75

Water Management District

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is a special local agency responsible for the comprehensive management of our water resources. It is governed by five elected and two appointed directors, and encompasses the cities of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Del Rey Oaks, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Sand City, Seaside and parts of Monterey County, especially Carmel Valley.

The district's major goals include: augment water supply, preserve environmental quality, manage supply and demand and promote conservation and reclamation. In order to achieve these goals, several programs and projects are slated for 1986.

Bringing the proposed San Clemente Dam to a vote as soon as possible is the district's top priority. To this end, the Draft EIR for the project, including an analysis of water supply alternatives, is targeted for June 1986. Following a review period and public hearings, the EIR should be certified by December. An intensive effort is underway to

City looks to a productive year

By DAVID MARADEI
Carmel City Councilman

The residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea can look forward to an interesting, controversial and productive 1986. Three major elements of the general plan are being fulfilled through the commitment and support of you, the residents.

In the second week of January the clearing of the lots for the Senior Citizens Housing Project will occur. You will have an opportunity to see this project grow to completion in 1986. There will be 15 units completed with the sensitivity and style that you expect from your city. More importantly, much-needed housing will be provided for our seniors, housing that will be affordable and will remain affordable. That will give some of our current residents the opportunity to remain in the city that they love without being pushed out by increasingly higher rents while living on fixed incomes. This will be a project we will look to with pride.

The Scenic Road Beach Walkway is another ambitious project that has been evaluated and discussed for the past decade by various councils, boards and commissions. It is now being circulated for environmental impact review. Once all of the serious concerns have been evaluated and addressed we can expect the final drawings to be prepared and the bid packages to be distributed. We are planning for the construction phase of this project to begin in late spring.

This project has been budgeted over a three-year plan and we remain on schedule. The importance of this project cannot be underestimated in light of the traffic and parking concerns of our community. The main objective of the project is the preservation of the beach bluffs. Additional beach access points, the ability to walk in an area free from automobile hazards, and the creation of a pedestrian atmosphere are major elements of this project.

There has been considerable public acclaim for the recreation programs that the city started in the summer of 1984. The programs have been guided to success by the Recreation Committee which has been instructed to draw up guidelines for the permanent place-

Rape victims help each other help themselves

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(Fourth in a series)

ANNETTE SMILES as she talks about spending Christmas with her older daughter. Past difficulties between mother and daughter were put aside for the holiday and a spirit of reconciliation seemed to be truly within grasp this time.

Suddenly Annette's beautiful smile turns into a tight-lipped quiver and she bursts into tears; her grandmotherly face wrinkles and the half-century old burden cries out from its dark corner buried deep into the soul of a woman with a troubled past.

But she understands that only by unlocking the hideous secret can she truly find peace.

"I just feel like everything was my fault," she sobs, trying to control the shaking voice that only minutes earlier brimmed with confidence and well-being. "I didn't want to give up that love and attention...I should have known better."

Annette briefly pauses and the silence from the other women give her a respite. The tears still come, but she gains strength knowing that the taboo can be broken.

"Sometimes when I make love to my husband I see his face. Two times when I was writing my husband notes I wrote his name...That scared the hell out of me," Annette told the group.

The man she is speaking about was her uncle, who sexually assaulted Annette throughout her teenage years a half century ago. The guilt, the shame and the fear has stayed with Annette so much so that even as an adult the experience psychologically affected her parenting to a point where mother and daughters were more warring factions than a loving family.

Only now, thanks to a special free counseling program offered through the Monterey Rape Crisis Center, is Annette and other victims of sexual assault able to confront and resolve the emotional traumas of rape, child abuse and molestation.

The Thursday evening weekly counseling sessions are supervised by Jacqueline Fobes, an educational psychologist with a private practice in Pacific Grove.

"Many rape victims feel isolated. They feel they are the only ones who have the gamut of emotions," Fobes explained. "The main focus of this group is to help make the people know they're not alone to reduce their feeling of isolation."

'Sometimes when I make love to my husband I see his face...I wrote his name. That scared the hell out of me.'

THERE IS no one description to fit the victims in Fobes' group — they are young and old, male and female, professional and unemployed, talkative and shy.

Time is not relative either. Annette's assault occurred 50 years ago while another woman was raped just recently.

"It could have happened yesterday or 20 years ago," Fobes said. "Twenty years ago rape was not an open subject as it is today. It was hidden away and you didn't tell anybody."

The common bond is the crime committed upon their bodies and their psyches.

Sexual assault results in several different phobias that have dramatic effects on personal lifestyle. "It limits their ability to interact with the world," Fobes said.

Some of the common problems include the fear of being alone, sleeping in the dark, traveling in a car and going out at night, she said.

One of the most difficult traumas to overcome after being attacked — especially in the case of child molestation — is the fear of ever trusting someone again, Fobes said.

"If you don't trust someone you can't get close. Without that intimacy what kind of life do you have?" she questioned.

The group also helps support one another during the week. Often members will call each other at home when there is a particularly rough time.

It is Marie's first time at the therapy session. Sometimes there are as many as 13 present, including a male victim. Tonight the group is the smallest, probably because of the holiday season. There are five women and Fobes present.

Marie sits in a fold-out chair off to the right next to Fobes. Neat in appearance, Marie looks more like a legal secretary or a banker. Rape knows no stereotype.

Separated from an abusive husband, Marie is living hand to mouth. A new job has little promise except to put food on the table and a roof over her head.

Marie crushes out her third cigarette before continuing.

One day at a convenience store she met a man with fire in his eyes and immediately saw a chance to extend her love to someone who doesn't have the word in his dictionary.

Marie and the man enjoyed a close sexual relationship for a few weeks. "When he made love to me it was so perfect. He was communicating," her voice trails off.

Then one day he snapped and went crazy on her. Marie was beaten and raped for hours on end. He also robbed her.

The man eventually was arrested on the robbery charge but Marie cannot bring herself to tell police about the sexual assault.

MARIE IS nervous. Within weeks she has to testify in court against him.

"Don't go there yourself. You need support," Fobes stresses. She adds that a Rape Crisis Center volunteer will attend the hearing with Marie for emotional support.

Fobes asks if Marie has filed charges.

"Did you tell them you were raped?"

"No," Marie said.

"I think you better," Fobes advises.

Marie is hesitant. "Nobody wants to hear what happens to you," she cries.

"Do you have any friends on the peninsula?" Fobes whispers.

Jacqueline Fobes:

'Many rape victims feel isolated. They feel they are the only ones who have the gamut of emotions. The main focus of this group is to help make the people know they're not alone to reduce their feeling of isolation.'

"No, no one," Marie responds.

Marie's family has been of little help. What was their reaction?

"They all think I'm a whore now," Marie says.

Marie is torn between her concern for the rapist and the need to see him punished. She still does not see herself as the victim.

"I love him still...I don't feel hatred. Oh, I'm very determined he be prosecuted. I want him incarcerated. I want help made available to him," Marie says.

Fobes turns to the other four women to hear if there are any suggestions.

Cheryl, who couldn't be more than 30, says, "there's a whole victim pattern here. It's a cycle. Don't put yourself in these positions that you can be victimized."

"Who said you are responsible for his life? You're still being a victim," continues Cheryl, a rape victim who this night talks little about her case.

Fobes views Marie's problem. "Your feeling for him is the control he has over you. This is a very severe psychological problem you need to break."

Fobes also advises that Marie seek counseling through the Family Resources Center. She knows Marie is broke and does not omit that the center offers counseling on a sliding scale affordability basis.

"Stop being a victim!" Cheryl practically screams at Marie.

"Jesus, you're right," Marie says.

"I think you made the right first step by coming to the group tonight," Fobes says.

As with most sessions, the group goes in a circle with each having an opportunity to discuss their feelings.

Fobes turns to Linda, who has sat silently apart from the group. Linda was assaulted by her father when she was just four. As she grew older, her father let other men have sex with her. Her mother knew, but did nothing.

Linda has just returned from visiting her mother — a trip she hoped would establish a loving relationship but one that ended in traumatic disappointment.

'WOULD YOU prefer not to talk tonight?" Fobes asks.

Linda is strong, but soon it's too much.

"Secrets. I hate secrets. It had to be secrets. I just wanted to talk to her," Linda breaks down as she talks about her father's abuse.

Linda does not see herself making progress.

Other members try to calm her. "You've come so far from where you were a year ago," Annette says.

Cheryl says that in such instances "we take three steps forward and two steps back. Your visit to your mom was the two steps back. You have come forward leaps and bounds. When you first started coming to group I didn't think you would snap out of it. You have."

Fobes adds, "I think you have to be patient kiddo."

"All I wanted was a real mom. Somebody who would take care of me and tell me it wasn't right for what he did to me," Linda sobs.

"That's one of the things you're going to have to come to grips with. That you will never have that mom," Fobes says.

"It's not fair," Linda says.

"You're a strong lady underneath it all. You're really a strong lady," Fobes continues, leaning in the chair closer to Linda.

There is quiet for a moment and then Cheryl interrupts with, "I have a happy story."

Cheryl then tells about her Christmas with her mother and how it has become the beginning of a reconciliation. Cheryl was raped by a friend and like Linda's parent, her mother chose to ignore the incident.

"I really feel like I'm beginning to like her, but I don't expect her to be what she's not," Cheryl says.

Cheryl explains that it was important for her to be mad at her mother for a while.

"I worked it out by being mad at her and hating her. I had to go through a period of really hating her guts and calling her every bad name there is."

Cheryl turns to Linda and advises, "You have to let yourself hate her. Don't try to love her because you don't."

It's Annette's turn. She talks about the holidays with her daughter.

Annette's trying to write a letter expressing her thoughts about being raped by an uncle when she was 12 and 13.

It is then she explains that often when making love to her husband she sees her uncle's face.

"My mom never understood. How could she be so blind?" Annette wondered.

Linda knows the feeling. "I was four when it started," she tells Annette.

FOBES TELLS Annette, "you can't hide something for 40 or 50 years and have it go away in six months."

Cheryl adds encouraging words, "when you first came to group you were totally unapproachable. Now, your face, there's a beauty to it. There's love. You don't have the 'I hate myself' look."

"I think we see growth in each other," Fobes adds.

Cheryl then recalls a recent incident where a man she did not want to see sent her flowers. The incident was stressful.

"I went around for two days hating men, I hated them. I knew I had to do it before I could like them again," Cheryl said.

"I called (Fobes) that night. It really scared me. All that hatred came out," she continues.

"That will be a passing thing," Fobes says.

"It already has. I just didn't want to stuff it inside anymore," Cheryl responds.

Dorothy is the quiet one of the group. Cute as a high school cheerleader and probably not much older, she was molested but never physically raped.

Dorothy has recurring nightmares, but she is optimistic about a decrease in the frequency of the bad dreams.

"Sometimes I'm able to go right back to sleep. When I can't go back to sleep it's mostly due to other problems in life, the job, a parking ticket," Dorothy explains.

Linda adds, "I had one last night and I couldn't go back to sleep. I haven't been to sleep since three this morning."

And Marie says that after a nightmare she simply does not want to continue. "I wish I could never open my eyes again."

Cheryl interrupts Marie, "The problem is not his problem. The problem is you. Stop thinking about him. Start thinking about you."

The hour has passed and the conversation shifts to more routine daily topics like new hairstyles and the latest television shows as the women put away coffee cups, grind out their cigarettes, and hug one another.

At least for now they know they are not alone.

(The events described are a true account of a recent group therapy session at the Monterey Rape Crisis Center. The names were changed and some specifics altered to protect the victims. For more information call 373-3955. The 24-hour crisis line is 375-HELP.)

HOSPICE PROGRAMS TO BE EXPLAINED

Nancy Pluth, clinical manager of Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, will speak to the Retired Public Employees Association of California, Chapter 67, at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11 at the Community Room of the Monterey Public Library. Pluth will discuss the hospice's programs, services and how people may qualify for the program. For more information contact Phyllis Howard at 624-3625.

CYPRESSAIRES MEET WITH SONG IN THEIR HEARTS

The Cypressaires, the chorus of the local barbershop harmony chapter, will celebrate its 30th anniversary Jan. 11 in connection with installation of 1986 chapter officers at the Presidio of Monterey Officers' Club. The chapter's founder, Dr. Paul Spangler, will be in attendance, along with a dozen or so charter members.

Among the activities slated for the night are presentation of the Barbershopper of the Year to a member selected by secret ballot and a special award — unspecified at this time — will be presented by Bob Arthur, outgoing president. Several chapter quartets will perform during the evening, including one of the chapter's original foursomes, which includes Spangler.

New officers to be installed include: Paul Jones, president; Bruce Bloxom of Carmel, membership vice president; Ernie Smith, program vice president; Jim Fleming, secretary; and Dave Wiebe, treasurer. Other board members are Carmel's Glenn Hudgens, Harold Ostergren and Arnold Ruiz, who holds the distinction of being the only true barber in the chapter.

SHERIFF TO INSTALL "SHERIFF"

Monterey County Sheriff Bud Cook will speak to the Monterey County Corral of Westerners at their regular meeting at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 13 in the Parish Hall of St. John's Episcopal Church in Monterey. Cook will speak on the "Sheriff's Departments in Yesteryears." The program is free and open to the public. Cook will also install the "Sheriff" and other officers of the organization. A potluck dinner at 7 p.m. precedes Cook's talk. For further information contact

MONTEREY BAY SYMPHONY KICKS OFF NEW YEAR

The Colleagues of the Monterey Bay Symphony will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 14 at the Thunderbird Bookstore in The Barnyard at the mouth of the Valley. There will be a musical interlude and champagne to celebrate the beginning of a new year for the new symphony. For more information contact Helen Parker at 372-6994.

MASONIC LODGE CEREMONY SLATED

Carman Guidara will succeed Wendall W. Smith as Master of Pacific Grove Lodge 331, F&AM, during installation ceremonies starting at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11 at the Pacific Grove Masonic Temple, Lighthouse and Central in Pacific Grove. The rites will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30 p.m. For more information call 649-3055.

HELP NEEDED FOR AFRICAN COUNTRY

Carmel residents Bill and Jamelle McCampbell are soliciting donations for the Transkei (pronounced "trans-sky") Foundation, a non-profit corporation that funds the University of Transkei in the Republic of Transkei, Africa, in medicine, agriculture and electronics and hiring of American professors to teach there.

Transkei is a black, independent, democratic, non-communist republic with a population of 2.5 million that gained its independence peacefully from South Africa in 1976.

If you're interested in making a donation contact the McCampbells at 625-1217 or 625-9835.

GOURMET GALA FAST APPROACHING

More than two dozen celebrities from sports, entertainment, business and government will compete in Monterey Peninsula's first annual Gourmet Gala, Friday, Jan. 17, a black-tie dinner-dance at the Monterey Sheraton sponsored by the Monterey Vineyard as a benefit for the March of Dimes fight against birth defects.

Among the celebrity chefs will be Clint Eastwood, Hank Ketcham, Allen Funt, Bobby Clampett, Rep. Leon Panetta, film producer Paul Monash, Bud Allen, Anne Anka, Frank Crispo, Cal Rossi, Virginia Stanton, Lord and Lady Barclay Ferguson and Verdine White of the pop group Earth, Wind and Fire.

Teams of celebrities will prepare favorite dishes in kitchens specially designed for the event. Celebrity judges include, among others, Craig Claiborne (yes, THE Craig Claiborne), Chez Panisse's Alice Waters, Sardine Factory's Bert Cutino, and San Francisco Chronicle food editor Jane Benet.

The gala's theme is "The Flavors of Monterey," and the guest list is "limited" to 400 people at $100 each to benefit the March of Dimes. Celebrity dishes will be duplicated by Sheraton staff. Honorary chairmen for the event are actress Jane Wyatt and Monterey Vineyard Winemaker and President Richard Peterson.

VOTERS NEEDED FOR NO-NUKES PETITION

Signatures of at least 1,100 registered voters of the City of Monterey must be gathered by Jan. 15 in order for a charter amendment making Monterey a nuclear-free zone (as Carmel is) to appear on the June 1986 ballot. The proposed amendment would make it a misdemeanor to knowingly or intentionally store, manufacture or do research on nuclear warheads or weapons or their components in Monterey. Exempted would be the Presidio of Monterey and the Naval Postgraduate School because they are federal facilities. Those interested in signing may contact the Monterey County Nuclear Weapons Freeze office at 625-5508.

ALL ABOARD THE ORIENT EXPRESS

Otto and Sandy Kahn of Carmel were the big winners New Year's Eve at the Monterey Plaza Hotel's opulent black tie bash taking in the new year. The Kahns took the grand prize in the hotel's drawing: a one-way train ride on the world-famous Orient Express from Venice to London, a two-day excursion with an overnight stay on the train. Congratulations to the lucky couple.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON SCHOOL OPEN HOUSE

The faculty and students of the Robert Louis Stevenson School will be hosting an open house for prospective students and interested parents on the school's Pebble Beach campus, Saturday, Jan. 11. Registration is from 8:30 to 9 a.m. in Douglas Hall, and the program begins at 9:15 a.m. The program will include an introduction to the Stevenson curriculum, discussion of academic, fine arts, and athletic offerings, conferences with faculty members, tours of the campus, and a buffet luncheon.

Donald J. Saluta, director of admission, will be available to discuss entrance requirements and admission procedures. School representatives will also be on hand to answer questions about campus activities, the Stevenson boarding program, and use of the resources of the Monterey Peninsula within the school program.

Stevenson School is an independent college preparatory, coeducational day and boys boarding school, grades 9-12, open to any qualified student regardless of race, creed, sex and national or ethnic origin.

FORMER CARMEL residents Alexandra Parker and Ronald Horner were married Oct. 30, 1985 at the Mount Kenya Safari Club in Nairobi, Kenya, where they now reside. Alexandra is the former owner of Alexandra's Accessories in the Carmel Plaza.

Odello compromise

"I'm still trying to find a way to compensate the Odellos if they can guarantee they will provide flood protection," Strasser Kauffman said.

The Odellos have promised to lower the levee and flood their artichoke fields to protect the shopping centers at the mouth of the Valley and the Mission Fields residential neighborhood off Rio Road in the event of a 100-year flood.

Bruna Odello stopped short of endorsing the proposed compromise, but did say she is pleased that there is a possibility of settling out of court.

"We've always compromised. We've always agreed to meeting and discussing," she said.

"I hope this brings to an end all the problems with the ranch. I'd like it to end. I'd like peace. We'd like to go on with our lives and not have this thing hanging over us," Odello continued.

"I'd like to understand what this will mean. I'm pleased we're making headway toward a solution," she added.

The proposed settlement could sway the Coastal Commission to remand to the county the issue of permissive zoning for the Odello Ranch that is included in the Carmel Area Land Use Plan.

The city of Carmel recently won a court case that determined the Coastal Commission erred in its adoption of special treatment for the Odello property.

PINE INN

A EUROPEAN PLAN HOTEL
CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
CALIFORNIA
(408) 624-3851

To my friends and patrons:

It is with deep emotion that I must announce the sale of the Pine Inn.

Opal and I purchased the hotel in 1962 with highest hopes for the future. In 1968 my son Max and his family joined us in the operation. The years that followed proved that dreams can come true, thanks to you. We knew that the very core of our existence was our customers. Satisfied customers were our guarantee of future business and prosperity.

To our friends and customers I wish to thank you, for your loyalty and patronage. You have made our years at the Pine Inn happy and fulfilling.

To our faithful employees, I commend you. Many of you have been with the hotel longer than we. Your dedication has contributed greatly in making the Pine Inn the establishment that it is.

I feel certain the new proprietors, Richard Gunner and George Andros will continue the Pine Inn tradition of excellence and service.

Sincerely,

Carroll M. McKee

BUSINESS BEAT BY NANCY HILLS

It's all wrapped up

THE GRAND old queen of Carmel, Pine Inn, officially came under the care of two new admirers Dec. 30, Richard Gunner and George Andros.

Carroll McKee sold Carmel's oldest hostelry to the two gentlemen from Fresno after putting the hotel on the market earlier last year. The purchase price was about $10 million, I understand.

Gunner and Andros, I have been told by their representatives, have interests in agriculture and real estate in the Fresno area. I was scheduled to speak with them but, unfortunately, family illness drew them back to Fresno, so our conversation had to be put off for a bit.

They did not, however, leave "the ship without a captain." Manager Chris McKay has taken over operation of Pine Inn.

Let anyone run down and fling themselves bodily before the historic structure crying "Developers, spare this inn," I was told by McKay that the first objective is maintenance work. After that is completed, then they will look at what they have and decide how to fine tune the operation.

PINE INN manager Chris McKay enjoys the history and background of the hotel. He said the new owners plan to take their time and study the inn and the market in Carmel. (Nancy Hills photo.)

The restaurant and beverage department, in particular, will receive attention, McKay said.

"We want to bring back the good, fresh American food the Pine Inn used to serve," he said.

McKay's wife, Marcelle, is a chef and will work on a new menu, he said. Both of them will have their hands full. Not only do they have an 11 month-old-boy but they are expecting another child soon.

McKay is an accountant who has been in the hotel and restaurant consulting business for some time. He said he entered the business after he worked to rescue "the last remaining waterfront hotel" in San Francisco, which was slated to be demolished and replaced with offices. He was not pleased that people did not care about the historical quality of the hotel and just wanted "another empty office building."

The historical quality of Pine Inn intrigues him, and McKay said he wants to bring some of its history to light. He is especially interested in hearing from people who honeymooned or had family reunions at the inn.

In fact, if anyone has old photographs of the Pine Inn, McKay said he would love to see them and would even pay to have them duplicated if necessary. So open up those old photo albums and take a look.

There will be no change in the exterior paint except for repainting where it needs it, McKay said. But no major structural changes are planned.

NATURAL CHANGES

If you hear the sound of hammers pounding and saws buzzing when in the Village Center in Carmel Valley Village, you are probably pretty close to Carmel Valley Natural Foods.

New owners Mary and Donald Edwards are changing things around a bit, getting ready to add a few new items and expand on some old. The Edwards took over the natural foods store in November (last year!) from former owners Wendy and Fred Jones. The Joneses, Mary Edwards said, moved to Mountain View so Fred Jones could attend chiropractor college.

So along come the Edwards from Elyria, Ohio. Just so happens that Mary Edwards owned and operated a health food store in Ohio for nine years, before they arrived in California last September. According to her daughter, Mary runs the store here, too.

Did I say changes? Most certainly. But we're not talking about bringing in Twinkies, Doritos and Cap'n Crunch cereal.

In fact, Mary Edwards said they are adding more bulk products such as grains, nuts and carob candies. New vitamin lines — Solgar, Nature's Way and Naturally — will also be added, she said, and the gourmet section will be expanded.

"We also do a lot of work with people who are on restrictive diets, like diabetics or people on salt-free diets" Edwards said.

Mary Edwards may be running the place but she will have plenty of help from the rest of her family including her husband and their children Nancy, Donna and Don Jr.

Edwards added that a goal she has is to "educate people to basically take care of themselves better."

CARMEL PLAZA RUMORS

Things get a little dull around the holidays, so people start tugging on my sleeve and inquiring about the veracity of the "I heard this or that" rumors.

One of those grapevine informational sources has Saks Fifth Avenue opening a store in Carmel Plaza in the space left by the bankrupt Joseph Magnin stores. Rather well-informed sources of mine (don't you just love it!) say that a deal is in the works and something could be announced soon, maybe at the end of the month.

The Books, Inc. space in the Plaza, which should be up for grabs by March, may be filled by another bookstore, Brentano's, another tidbit of information I picked up. Books, Inc. should move into its Ocean Avenue location in February or March, if all goes according to plan.

ACHIEVE HAWAII

Most people look forward to a trip to Hawaii, but usually it's where they go to improve their external, rather than internal, condition.

Bee Epstein and Marsha Kading-Kelly believe working on both isn't mutually exclusive. The duo started, or re-started, tax-deductible Success Tours for the Achieving Woman.

The tour consists of seven days on the island of Kauai during which tour participants focus on leadership, corporate politics, entrepreneurial upward mobility, self-assessment, redirection, marketing and money management. Each participant and seminar will have a different emphasis, Epstein said.

This is not a brand new idea for Epstein. She said she originally put the concept together in 1979 and did conduct six tours. But she got "very involved" with other aspects of her business life, and did not have time to market the tours. The idea was laid aside until Kading-Kelly joined in to handle the marketing side of the business.

If the name Kading-Kelly sounds familiar, it might be because she is the former principal of Carmel High School.

SUCCESS IS the aim of both Bee Epstein, left, and Marsha Kading-Kelly for women who attend their Success Tours for the Achieving Woman. The first tour is scheduled for May 6-13 in Hawaii. (Nancy Hills photo.)

The seminars are scheduled in the morning, and range from informal discussion groups to a structured learning environment, Epstein said. People can "pick and choose" which ones they want to attend.

People who don't want to fly to Hawaii can find a similar but "mini" version here in Carmel. The first mini-retreat is scheduled to take place at La Playa Hotel Sept. 7-9 and will include everything from the seven-day tour except two dinners — not to mention the air fare to Hawaii, of course.

Though the tours will focus on women's issues in business, Epstein said that men are welcome to sign up. Men who are accompanying a woman who is on the tour can sign up for a seminar called "Living with an Achieving Woman."

FROM EAST TO WEST

Ever since European and Asian cultures were introduced, it's been a never-ending discussion of what perspective on harmony and disharmony better captures the essence of our existence.

How to treat or view one's own physical self has been a focal point in much of this discussion. Acupuncture, the insertion of fine needles into specific points of the body to treat illness or pain, is an Oriental medical science that has made its way from the Far East to the United States.

Melanie Lerner, an Oriental medical doctor and with an additional doctorate in Oriental medicine, said she practiced this ancient science for the past two years at Esalen Institute and has now moved her practice to 3855 Via Nona Marie, Carmel.

Lerner said she studied Oriental medicine in New England at the New England School of Acupuncture, and at California Acupuncture College. She received her OMD and Ph.D in Oriental medicine from Samra University.

What she learned, Lerner explained, along with anatomy, physiology and chemistry is how the body changes during interaction with the world around it.

That affects the way the doctor approaches the patients' treatment.

"In the Oriental outlook, everyone is treated in a different ways depending on the encompassing environment and how it affects the patient," Lerner said.

A major component of her studies concentrated on the anatomy of the different "meridian flows," or energy pathways, through the body. It is along the meridian flow that the acupuncture points are located, Lerner explained.

Lerner said she also uses massage, acupressure and cranial-sacral therapy (holding the head and relaxing the plates of the skull) in her work.

"One thing I am trying to impress on people is that my work is painless. I use the finest gauge needles from Japan — very, very thin. They are disposable kind so are only used once," she added.

She believes that electrical stimulation used by many modern day acupuncturists, can over "amp" the system and only uses it when strong stimulus is needed. That could include addictions, such as overeating and or alcohol consumption.

Lerner said she can treat almost anything, and has listed in her literature common colds, allergies, pain management, substance abuse, habit control, stress related disorders and physical problems related to female physiology.

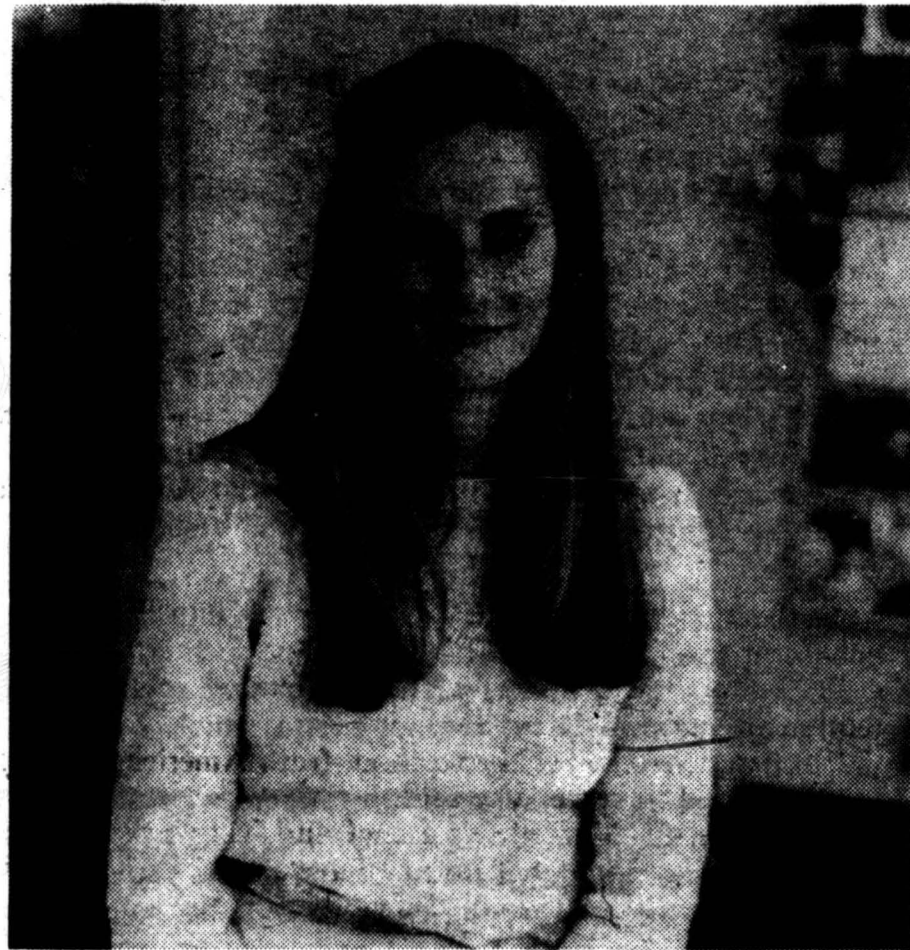

"I spend a lot of time with my patients," Lerner said. "I use a subtle technique which leaves the whole body responsive because it is so relaxed."

Each person is unique, she said and some heal more quickly than others.

HELP OUT

SCORE, Service Corps of Retired Executives, has been so successful it is looking for additional retired or soon-to-retire business managers to help counsel newly-formed businesses. The present program consists of Wednesday morning counseling sessions in Salinas and Tuesday and Thursday half-day sessions in Monterey. The counseling is individual, entirely confidential and at no cost to the client.

An introductory session for those interested in becoming involved with SCORE will be held Tuesday, Jan. 14 at Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce offices, 380 Alvarado St., Monterey. The Monterey/Salinas SCORE staff will be available to answer questions during the morning coffee hour at 10 a.m. Interested persons can call 649-1771.

ACUPUNCTURE SPECIALIST Melanie Lerner has opened her office on Via Nona Marie at the mouth of the Valley. Lerner was an acupuncturist at the Esalen Institute in Big Sur of two years before starting her private practice in Carmel. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Currently on a one-year leave of absence, she is taking the time to work with Epstein marketing the tours.

Kading-Kelly's enthusiasm for the project comes from her own experience as a participant in one of the original six tours.

"It helped me to define my management style. It also showed me the areas I needed to develop to be a well-rounded manager," Kading-Kelly said. "I did some networking with other women in business and it was interesting to see what others go through."

The seminars are taught by Nancy Lee, author of Targeting the Top, and who is "very well-known in her field of business management," Epstein said; and Judith Briles, a financial consultant and author of Money Phases and The Woman's Guide to Financial Savvy. Epstein will also teach.

Carmel Valley Needs You!

Join the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce

To support a healthy and balanced business climate here in Carmel Valley, join the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber serves businesses from the mouth of Carmel Valley to the beautiful rural reaches beyond the Village.

Why should you join the Carmel Valley Chamber? Look at these benefits...

Public Service. The Chamber works with other organizations and agencies in the Carmel Valley to assure the public good.

Visitor Promotion. The Chamber actively promotes our local hospitality business. It serves as a "clearing house" for brochures, maps, and information for people who inquire about Carmel Valley.

Public Affairs. Monthly Chamber luncheons feature speakers of interest to both business people and the community. Chamber luncheons are open to the public.

Press Releases. The public is made aware of Chamber activities through the three local newspapers. The Chamber membership also may use the office to publicize their businesses.

Christmas Decorations Contest. An annual event that finds the Chamber awarding cash prizes to winners in both residential and business categories.

Health Insurance. Special group rates for Chamber members.

Newsletter. A monthly publication brings all members up-to-date on Chamber and community events.

This week, 4 teams of devoted Chamber members will be calling upon you and telling you why you should join the Carmel Valley Chamber. Team leaders are...

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

The making of a candidate

AS I BEGIN this I'm looking at the front-page article in last week's Carmel Pine Cone which speculated on who might or might not become candidates for the upcoming Carmel City Council election.

Since I have been elected to the city council four times and served 16 years (more than anybody else), and since I have also been defeated four times (also probably a record), I feel I have some credentials as an authority on local self-government here.

The legal requirements for candidates aspiring to city elective office here are exactly the same as those in any other city in the state — residence within the city along with U.S. citizenship. But much more is required if Carmel-by-the-Sea is long to retain its special and greatly treasured character and if, in addition, it is to continue to seek and to achieve higher and even higher quality-of-life goals.

Ideally a model Carmel City Council member should have high intelligence, great wisdom and extraordinary vision — a combination all too rare at any level of government anywhere in the world. It is because Carmel — in its first 70 years of existence as a city — has had far more than any other small city's share of persons with such uncommon and distinguished qualities, that it is today an admired oasis in a world more and more focused merely on goods and gold.

Here some reader may well scratch his head and wonder just where I could have seen such paragons as that model Carmel City Council member I've just described.

Actually I have served with a number of Carmel council members of obviously high intelligence — more such persons than I have met among members of any other city council either here or elsewhere in the state. And, since I have attended a good many conventions of the League of California Cities, I have had reason to know many council members from other cities up and down the state, and thus to have seen how they've stacked up against Carmel's. But high intelligence is only one — and not the most important — quality to be sought in a Carmel council member.

The two other qualities — great wisdom and extraordinary vision — are the most important qualities. But there is much less unanimity about just what "great wisdom" is, and there is even less agreement about what "extraordinary vision" could possibly be.

So, just what has made up wisdom and vision, in any Carmel City Council member, must always have been essentially an individual judgment. In my view, the late Bert Heron is the one mayor and council member who would rate highest in all the three desired qualities I've described: intelligence, wisdom and vision. He had been a professional actor before coming to Carmel in the early 1900s, and he founded the once world-famous — and still widely known — Forest Theatre. And of all the arts, the theater in Carmel has been first and foremost, even though at various times interest in it and attention to it has ebbed.

Heron — who was mayor in the 1930s — was busy writing plays, acting in them, and producing them in the half-century from 1910 onward. When I was first elected to the city council in 1958 he was still active in city affairs, and he became a very busy member of what was dubbed my "Committee of One to One Hundred" by then-Mayor John Chitwood.

This frequently press-maligned "Committee" of mine did much good work during the two years it was in existence. Some 30 of the members, most of whom had held important positions in their fields of interest before coming to Carmel, proposed ideas and prepared detailed reports on ways in which commercial intrusion could be slowed and tourist-serving excesses could be halted. These committee members were also greatly concerned about seeing to it that their ideas and their reports would get the full attention of the city council, and they spoke again and again at council meetings. Eventually — as the time for the 1960 city election approached — they began to discuss candidates. And, at first, it looked as if the committee would consider fielding its own panel of candidates.

With some 30 committee members meeting every week to deal with city matters, the fielding of some three out of the 30 members to become city council candidates, did not seem to present any difficulties — especially since most of them lived within the city.

However, when committee members seemed to settle on a certain team of three candidates, it began to be apparent that neither that certain three nor any other committee members seemed at all enthusiastic about the idea of even becoming candidates. Why?

It wasn't very clear at first but as the time to take out nomination papers by would-be candidates approached, it began to look surprisingly as if no committee member would himself (or herself) even be willing to take any steps to run for office. While the reasons for reluctance were never very clearly expressed, there seemed to be a basic distaste for what I have elsewhere called the "political process" — and it is this same basic distaste which has kept superbly qualified persons, even here in Carmel, from seeking elective office. Here it might interest readers to know just what kind of ideas the three committee-preferred 1960 city council candidates who didn't run, tried so hard then and later to urge the Carmel City Council to put into effect.

The three who could have made such excellent city councilmen were Adm. C.W. Fisher, Lt. Col. Austin DeCamp and Col. Wesley W. Yale.

The most clearly electable of the three was Fisher who later became the first president of the Carmel Citizens Committee. His plan, which hasn't yet been enacted, was to limit the site of any individual commercial building to 8,000 square feet. The additional proviso was that the commercial structure could not take up more than 70 percent of the site. Despite my efforts, and those of others, the sites of individual commercial projects can still be an enormous 32,000 square feet. Fisher's plan would have made it impossible for any future motel or hotel to be built in Carmel or for any other commercial project requiring more than an 8,000-square-foot site to be constructed.

DeCamp had prepared an enormous Bristol board display which showed the square footage and the cubic content of every single commercial structure in the Carmel business district. His plan to put a strict limit on both the square footage and the cubic content of any future commercial structure has still not been put into city zoning law.

When DeCamp presented his detailed plan and Bristol board chart, the city council lauded him for his plan and expressed its admiration for his huge chart, but City Clerk Larry Rose eventually managed to lose both the plan and the chart.

Yale proceeded to work out a plan to put into effect the "fence-around-Carmel" idea which had been attributed to Perry Newberry, a former Carmel mayor whose name and fame has spread not only up and down the state but also across the country.

Yale found the idea of erecting a fence to be illegal but an alternative idea, he felt, could be pursued and would very likely be legal — a view which was then supported by a deputy state attorney general who had been a classmate of mine at Stanford many years before.

Yale pointed out that the city could not lock out cars with gates, but it did, and, as far as I know, it still does have full authority to control cars once they stand still beside any city street.

Yale therefore worked out a plan for the city to require purchase of windshield stickers, and to fine such cars as had no such stickers. He proposed a $1 price for such stickers, and he had projected detailed net revenue figures which could have equalled the entire city property tax, even if only 25 percent of the cars which should have bought the stickers, would actually have purchased them.

Newspapers up and down the state and across the country found Yale's proposal amusing and called it the Yale Lock-Out Plan. The idea still has merit and someday some city council may get busy trying it out.

While it is true that Carmel has managed, in spite of its failure to attract as councilmen such Carmelites as Adm. Fisher, Lt. Col. DeCamp and Col. Yale, to retain the essence of its founders' ideals, it is also true that interesting such persons now and in the future in running for the city council, could be enormously important.

of Carmel and this area is to offer opportunities and situations that can put to work the lively minds, the great reservoir of talent and the active hands of our seniors. It is hard to imagine a geographic area of like size which has the depth of talent and fine intellects Carmel possesses in retirees experienced in business and financial management, the creative arts, education and the academic world, government in all its forms, and fields of social welfare.

Through its volunteer activities involving more than 400 individuals, and through its variety of programs in many different spectrums, The Carmel Foundation seeks to satisfy, to encourage and to serve this segment of our peninsula society. Absolutely non-political and just as absolutely determined to carry on its program without government help, the foundation has survived, flourished, and served for 35 years through the generosity of its members and the community. It looks forward to 1986 as being a year to carry on a rich tradition of serving the Carmel community and the peninsula.

revenues. The key is that the Congress must not bow to special interests at the expense of low- and middle-income Americans. The fate of tax reform will be determined by how the leadership of the nation responds to that challenge.

OFFSHORE OIL. Last year was a roller coaster ride for the offshore oil issue. In July, California's congressional delegation reached a landmark agreement with Interior Secretary Hodel permitting oil and gas drilling in a small portion of California's coast now under a Congressional moratorium and protecting the remaining moratorium areas until the year 2000. In September, Secretary Hodel, reacting to oil industry pressure, withdrew his support for the agreement. In November, an attempt to extend the moratorium was defeated by one vote. In the end, Congress passed my amendment requiring the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with Congress again on a long-term solution to the issue. New talks should begin soon. I still hope that the agreement we reached in July, which I have introduced as legislation, will be the basis for a long-term solution to this issue.

Where 1985 was a year of deferral, 1986 may be a year of decision on issues affecting the lives of all Americans, and on issues directly affecting us here along the Monterey Peninsula. Our hope for a successful 1986 largely will depend on the leadership and courage of the Congress and the President to make tough choices. May 1986 be a happy year for our community and nation.

Memorial Library, Public Works and Sunset Center.

Other notable actions include (I'm sure there will be omissions) employment of a design planner, tree planting in the business district, a very successful start of summer and winter recreation programs, an innovative agreement between the city and the school district for mutual assistance and the storage of city materials at the district's Maintenance Facility, revamped accounting procedures, new investment guidelines, and installation of a 10,000-gallon water tank and pump which taps a spring at the foot of Ocean Avenue. This water presently is used for street sweeping, fire fighting and irrigation of public parks, trees and plants which saves both money and a scarce commodity. In case of drought or disaster, the spring could supply two gallons a day to each city resident.

Another "plus" accomplished last year, through a combined effort of parents, business people, service clubs, "old timers" and youths, is a new direction and increased utilization of the Carmel Youth Center. All those involved deserve high praise and — most important — our continued support.

One other stand-out achievement was the questionnaire. Results are still being cross-tabulated but it has already proven a valuable tool for decisions. This questionnaire, developed after much discussion and long hours of staff work is an example of a wish of the council — to get increased citizen input — being given form and substance by city staff. (An outside expert in this field, soliciting future business, estimated the value of the questionnaire at $50,000. It cost the city $8,000 plus the staff hours mentioned.)

The present council is made up of highly individualistic people who tend to view things from very different standpoints. However, we truly want to get things done for the benefit of our village. But, no matter how intelligent or how dedicated elected officials may be, they seldom are specialists in the extremely complex field of municipal administration. It is our professionals, the trained, experienced, dedicated and hard-working staff, that has provided the means for our council to make policy decisions. The council has concepts, goals, staff gives them means to realize them. Last year, council and staff have combined to "get things done." Major problems remain. Life is never dull in our unusual community. But the momentum is there and the means if we just have the will, the energy and the opportunity to continue to conserve and enhance life in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

spirit" will be highly influenced by being able to play together as one community.

The coming year will see the rehabilitation of Sunset Center after 20 years of neglect of this important community asset. The general maintenance of the public assets of our city were, in my opinion, not properly addressed by past councils and past city staff. The public facilities that you own require the same intelligent planned maintenance that our homes must have. You can expect them to continue to receive proper care during 1986.

The biggest controversy that you can expect in 1986 will come from the April elections. Candidates will be filing for the mayor's chair as well as two council seats. The business community has promised financial support for candidates supporting their views. One resident actor has openly declared war on the city council in a public address to the Carmel Business Association. The Carmel Property Owners Association (a coalition of developer interests, business interests and motel owners) has already conducted a paid professional survey to identify community issues.

It looks like a particularly interesting year.

Sam Farr

next year, we will be facing some very, very strong attempts by the oil companies to drill for oil off our central and northern coasts.

The third area of debate will be over toxic wastes. However, I am hoping that this subject will not be viewed in a controversial, as much as it will be in a cooperative, vein. The 44 million tons of toxic wastes produced in California each year need to be dealt with. The present methods of land disposal and deep well injection simply are not working.

Last year I authored a bill which provided $1 million in funds to find new ways and to promote new technologies to deal with toxic wastes. The bill also called for the State Department of Health Services to come up with recommendations on how we can reduce the amount of toxic wastes created each year. Storing the wastes is one problem. But it is time to stop creating so much of them.

Locally, all of this means that there will not be many funds for school or highway improvement (unless taxes are raised), and that our high-quality environment will face some severe challenges. However, none of these problems are unsolvable. Through cooperation between the public and private sectors, we can satisfactorily address each and every one of these problems.

I would seriously appreciate your involvement in these and any other issues relating to state government. If you have ideas for how problems can be solved, I would welcome the opportunity to hear them. Or even if you have some questions about new laws, or how to get something from state government, please contact me at 646-1980, or drop by my office.

Have a happy new year.

Strasser Kauffman

five-year moratorium has imposed on our local citizenry. Certainly I am as eager as anyone to have a plan we can implement instead of debate. At the same time, I am determined that the area plan for Carmel Valley be the best one we can make it. It should be the model plan we originally intended it to be. Regardless of the push for final adoption, however, there will be no short cuts in the public participation or open hearing process. This plan must last us into the 21st century and warrants the community's full attention and efforts this year.

I will continue in 1986 to work toward more carefully delineated water allocations. I believe that water consumption figures used in past planning bear re-examination. I will also be working with county staff to develop and adopt specific water conservation standards. We must prepare this year for an educated vote on the ballot measure for a new dam on the Carmel River — good figures will clarify the choices.

My principal goals beyond the Fifth District are for carefully-sited economic development county-wide. This means the rescue of blighted areas. It will require support to small businesses and job diversification beyond the traditional and vulnerable industry options in tourism, agriculture and the military.

There are many other areas where local government decision can make a real difference in 1986: public park maintenance, improved jail administration, social services delivery to outlying areas, and crime detention. In particular, I am pledged to establish an emergency shelter for the homeless on the Monterey Peninsula. It requires no crystal ball to predict that budget constraints will be tight for the county this coming year, since federal revenue sharing monies are bound to be reduced considerably. 1986 budgeting at the county level will truly test our values and priorities. Under no circumstances, however, will I be willing to postpone action to move on the actual construction of affordable homes in our communities. I want to see families moving into some units this very year!

All of these goals require a good working relationship and active cooperation among the supervisors on the board. I fully expect the harmony established last year to continue. And in all of this, we will require your advice and your support.

As you can see, I have very high expectations for 1986 — with your help, I am convinced they can and will be met!

News notes:

CV fire directors named

GENE ERNER and Timothy Heaston have been appointed to the Mid-Valley Fire Protection District Board of Directors, Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman has announced.

Strasser Kauffman will swear in the new directors when the board meets at 8 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 15 at the fire station on Carmel Valley Road.

Erner and Heaston are the first two appointments Strasser Kauffman has made to begin the replacement of four directors who promised to resign to avoid a walkout by the volunteer firefighters.

Anne McGowan was appointed earlier to fill a long-standing vacancy.

Heaston is a dentist with offices in Pacific Grove and Carmel Valley. He and his wife, Julie, also own the Farm Center Country Store. Heaston has served on the boards of the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees, Easter Seal Society, Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce and Rancho Tierra Grande Association.

Erner, a real estate salesman for Porter-Marquard, is a retired naval officer who completed a number of firefighting and damage control courses during his tour of duty. He currently serves on the boards of directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and Friends of Hidden Valley, and is a member of the Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club.

"Mr. Erner and Dr. Heaston will bring a quality of enthusiasm and dedication to service that residents of the district have come to expect," Strasser Kauffman explained.

"I am confident that their sense of responsibility will help to forge a fine working relationship between board and volunteers so that residents of the district will continue to be served well."

Strasser Kauffman added that none of the directors involved in the controversy — Doug Despard, Steve Thigpen, Ed Haber and Dick Krueger — asked to be reappointed.

Meeting cancelled

THE CARMEL City Council will not get a chance to meet with the consultant who will prepare the environmental impact report for the revised Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The council was to meet with the consultant and Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman Thursday, Jan. 16.

However, the consultant's contract already scheduled the maximum number of meetings and an additional session would cost the county an extra $500, according to Strasser Kauffman.

The council will have the opportunity to meet with the consultant during the several public hearings on the draft EIR, which should be ready for review this spring, she said.

Correction

In the Jan. 2 Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, we reported that Charlotte Townsend is the first elected mayor.

Unfortunately a key word — "woman" — was omitted; that made the report erroneous.

Former Mayor Barney Laiolo was the first elected mayor. That was in 1980. In 1982 Townsend defeated Laiolo to become the first elected woman mayor.

We apologize for any inconvenience the error may have caused.

A different kind of decathlon

New housing committee seeks members

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors created a new Housing Advisory Committee as part of its Inclusionary Housing Ordinance review plan.

The committee will oversee the collection and distribution of fee monies for affordable housing. Its major purpose will be to advise the board of supervisors and the planning commission on matters relating to the Housing Element of the Monterey County General Plan and the Inclusionary Housing Ordinance.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman is inviting interested residents of the Fifth Supervisorial District to apply for a two-year term on this committee.

Addiction film screened

The Recovery Center of the Monterey Peninsula will show a free film on chemical dependency, Romance to Recovery, at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 15 in the Education Center, 576 Hartnell St., Monterey.

A discussion on drug addiction and alcoholism will follow. For more information, call 373-0924.

CONCRETE OR ASPHALT? THAT IS THE QUESTION

The first 1921 meeting of the city fathers, held on Tuesday night, was an interesting one, not so much so because of business actually transacted, but by reason of the discussion of plans for the improvement of Ocean Avenue.

Contractor R. Ruthven addressed the meeting concerning the advantages of concrete over natural bitumen, and trustees and citizens, of which there were a large number present, talked about the manner in which the improvement should be financed. Two plans were suggested, one requiring that the property owners on Ocean Avenue shoulder the entire expense, the other that the property owners bear the expense only from Mission Street to San Antonio, and that west of San Antonio the cost be assumed by the property owners and all other city lots.

It was stated that the cost of concrete would be about 25 cents a square foot and bitumen 21 or 22 cents.

COUNCIL DIRECTS PLANNERS AGAIN TO STUDY PARKING

Last night the Carmel City Council directed the planning commission to "undertake a study and make recommendations on off-street parking standards and programs."

Councilman John Chitwood informed the council that the Carmel Business Association is working on an off-street parking plan.

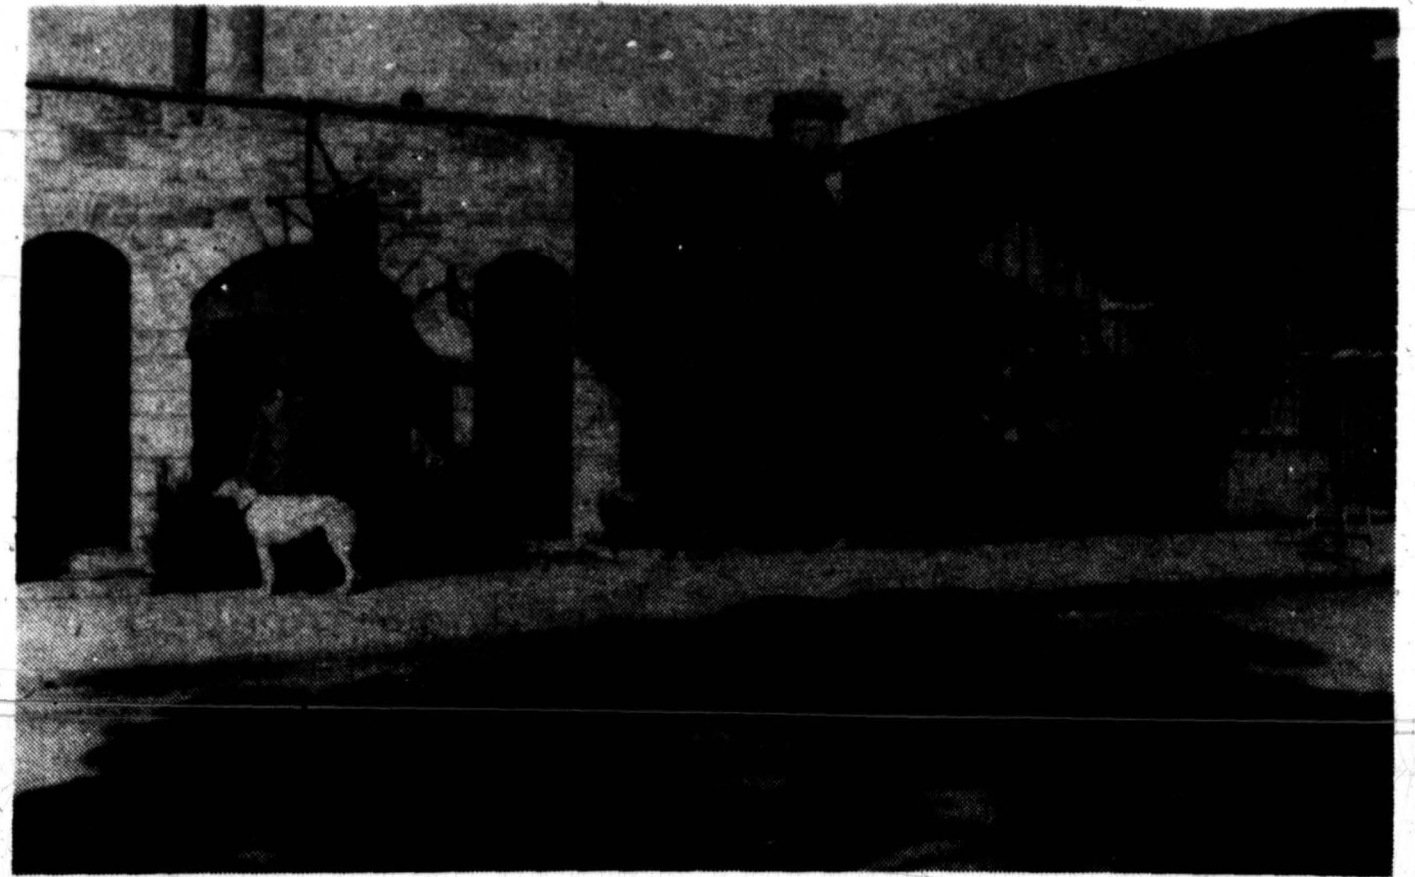

"The parking problem has been under consideration for 11 years," Councilman Chitwood observed wearily. He said that the P-1 amendment to the zoning ordinance, which sets up machinery for rezoning for parking lots use residence property adjacent to the business district, is a step forward.

He urged again that the "cater-corner lot from the post office" be acquired, not only because it would provide additional post office parking but would also split traffic flow in that congested area.

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL EXPANDS SERVICE

Construction of a new Outpatient Pavilion will begin in 1981 and Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will also be conducting a series of free monthly workshops to help residents understand and deal with their health problems.

Groundbreaking for the Outpatient Pavilion building is expected in February, with construction due to start in the spring.

The project will allow the hospital to consolidate outpatient care and provide space for 15 key departments that are now severely overcrowded.

Host families needed

Host families are needed for teenagers from Germany, Spain, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Japan who are arriving in January and early spring to participate in the Academic Year in America program sponsored by the American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation of Greenwich, Connecticut.

The foundation is seeking local community leaders throughout the U.S. who will welcome these teenagers into their homes. These English speaking young people all wish to learn more about American society by living with a family and attending a local high school.

Host families can select a student by reviewing a "picture profile" — a photo and short description of the student's background, personality and hobbies.

The foundation's local coordinator then arranges for the student to be placed in a local high school and remains in close contact with the family and the visiting student.

Host family members participating in this intercultural experience earn scholarships of up to $800 which are applicable to more than 100 overseas study and travel programs.

The American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation is a non-profit educational association which was established in 1967 to promote worldwide understanding through cross-cultural exchange.

For details on how you can become a host family and "Share American with the World," write: American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation, Dept. PR 10, 100 Greenwich Ave., Greenwich, CT 06830 or call toll free 800-841-9028.

percent federal grant and a 12½ percent state grant. The direct local share cost was approximately 15 cents on the dollar.

Because of the completion of our improvement project, it will be possible for the board of directors to rescind ordinances adopted in 1976 which limited sewer connections and annexations to the district. The improved facility has already been authorized to process three million gallons of sewage per day. Its ultimate capacity is four million gallons per day. On the premise that a utility is here to serve the needs of land use as determined by land planners, the board of directors have fulfilled their responsibility by assuring adequate sewer capacity for proper land development.

The district continues in its effort to find funding for its already-designed reclamation project, which would displace 1,500 acre feet of potable water during the summer months of May through October. Toward this end, the district recently joined in a partnership with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the County of Monterey and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea in hiring a technical expert to analyze the various aspects of reclamation on the peninsula in order to determine the most practical and cost-effective reclamation project. At a meeting held in December 1985, the Steering Committee of the partnership did hire a consultant. His final report will be available April 1, 1986.

The Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors, management and staff look forward to another year of service with their newly improved secondary wastewater treatment facility.

revise and complete the computer operations model, which forms the basis of many project-related decisions. An engineer's report must also be completed before the vote.

As part of the water rights application process, the district continues its negotiations to secure water release agreements with California Department of Fish and Game, develop stipulations with private water well pumpers in Carmel Valley, secure access agreements with landowners and finalize agreements with other state agencies.

Another important district function is to preserve and maintain the quality of our water resources. An active toxics monitoring program is underway, in cooperation with other county agencies. Water wells will be monitored for hazardous materials and septic contamination in Carmel Valley, while testing for salt water intrusion is planned for the Seaside area.

The Carmel River Management Program will continue its work to maintain and restore the river environment. More willow planting is planned and a new Boronda Erosion Control Project is being considered with extensive public participation. An irrigation program along the Carmel River will be "on line" to preserve streamside vegetation near large production wells in the lower Carmel Valley during dry periods.

Managing present water supply and demand includes completion of a ground water model for Carmel Valley, review of current water allocations to determine whether changes should be made, updating water-use figures to better project demand and monitoring water connection permits.

An active program to promote water conservation and reclamation is also planned. Continuing activities include in-school education, presentations and materials with water-conserving ideas, a drought-tolerant landscape contest and demonstration garden and leak-detection seminars. A comprehensive water conservation plan should be approved by spring.

The district has entered into a Joint Study Agreement with the county, City of Carmel, and the Carmel Sanitary District to fund an assessment of the reclamation alternatives for the Monterey Peninsula. Based on the study results, a Joint Powers Agency might be formed to implement the recommended project.

School board to examine state study of district

How WELL does the Carmel Unified School District comply with state mandates?

That is the question that will be answered when the board of education meets at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan 14 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

On the agenda is a report from Supt. Robert Infelise that will detail the results of a Jan. 7-8 state Department of Education study of the district.

The study will focus on how well the district has complied with the mandates established by the state for state-funded programs, such as special education and transportation.

In other action, trustees will:

- Consider a policy on computer software.
- Develop a policy for dealing with complaints about district personnel.
- Schedule a visit to the maintenance and transportation facility.
- Hear a report on the high school basketball team's Hawaii tournament over the Christmas break.

CHALK MARKS

Time on task

By FRANK LYNCH
Carmel Middle School Principal

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of the recent resurgence of interest in education has been the significance tied to "time on task." National and international researchers in the field of education have long been studying and borrowing from time-proven business axioms such as "the more time you spend in productive work, the more you will produce." As obvious as this appears to both you and me, it has not been easily infused into the daily routine of our schools, but strides are being made.

The first attempts towards accomplishing the better use of time in our classrooms is to provide more time for our teachers to instruct their students. SB813 legislated that districts throughout the state will provide increased instructional time on a daily basis and that the school year would be lengthened. These mandates have been enacted in Carmel Unified School District and progress towards the total implementation has begun. However, SB813 was not and is not the panacea for the ills that beset education in dealing with using every precious minute possible for instruction.

In the long haul, we will all benefit from these increases in time and the number of days, but for the present, I am more concerned about the quality of this time. All of us have been associated with people who are workaholics. They are on the job from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., pushing papers around and appearing to be accomplishing a great deal, while in reality, the end product is not necessarily of any better quality. This holds true about education.

Good instruction does not necessarily follow just by increasing the amount of time. Education or learning on the part of the student does not necessarily become better just because the child happens to be in his seat longer. The student and the instructor must have quality (uninterrupted) time.

It is incumbent upon the administration of a school to guarantee quality time by minimizing interruptions that occur within the classroom.

It is also important that parents acknowledge the fact that time, particularly quality time, is valuable. Parents can help by making sure that their students are on time to school every day. This habit is very important because it has a carry-over effect to when the child enters the work force. It also sends out a clear message to the child that every minute of class time is important.

In addition to being on time, parents must cooperate with the school by planning trips and vacations in coordination with the regularly scheduled vacations and holidays that are published by the school. Squeezing a vacation or a trip in during the middle of a school year sends out a loud and clear message to all concerned and that is: school is not that important. Whether this message is given consciously or not, the importance of what is taking place daily in the classroom is being undermined.

It has been said that Western education, i.e., education in the United States, must emulate what is taking place in Japan and in European countries where students go to school six days a week and more than 200 days per year. Businesses throughout the United States are also pointing towards Japan and Germany as countries to model our educational system after. Quality time is revered by Japan and Germany. The people of these countries respect education and what it stands for. Teachers are respected and "time on task" is the expectation. Holidays are scheduled around the school's vacations. School is valued by both students and teachers. Above all, it is cherished by parents because they see "time on task" as tantamount to being successful.

OBITUARIES

Jeanne D. Klech

Cremation took place at the Bryan Baker Funeral Home in Fairfield for Jeanne Demaree Klech, a businesswoman and Carmel Valley resident for more than 30 years who died Dec. 22 in Fairfield of a heart attack. She was 62.

Born Oct. 11, 1923 in Kansas City, Mo., she was a graduate of Park College in Parkville, Mo. She was the proprietor of the Pampered Hamper at Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, which she owned and operated for 20 years.

Survivors include her husband Bill; a son, Bill II of Suisun; a daughter, Dianne Saugier of Shawnee, Kan.; her mother, Ophelia Demaree of Kansas City, Mo.; and four grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the American Cancer Society.

Edwin Leigh Rich

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, followed by scattering of ashes at sea, for Edwin Leigh Rich, a former mayor of Santa Cruz who died Dec. 18 at Community Hospital Dec. 18 after being stricken at his home at Hacienda Carmel. He was 82.

Born April 27, 1903 in Chicago, he was elected to a two-year term on the Santa Cruz Council in 1941, and served as mayor on a part-time basis, working at the same time in the Richmond Shipyards. He later went into business for himself as a draftsman in Palo Alto. He lived at Hacienda Carmel since 1964.

Survivors include his wife, Olean; a son, Charles of Santa Clara; three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

At his request, no services took place. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Arthur E. Hansen

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Arthur E. Hansen, a resident of Carmel for one year who died Dec. 16 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital. He was 76.

Born Nov. 2, 1909 in San Francisco, he worked there as a teamster for many years. After retirement, he moved to Clear Lake where he lived from 1970 to 1984. He was a veteran of World War II.

Survivors include a stepson, Frederick Ask of Carmel; a sister, Edna Pisa of Cupertino; two grandchildren, one great-grandchild and many nieces and nephews. His wife Elsie died in 1984.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Mimi A. Klene

Memorial services took place Dec. 19 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley for Mimi A. Klene of Carmel, a patron of the arts and pianist throughout her life, who died Dec. 15 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital. She was 94.

Born March 4, 1891 in Duluth, Minn., she lived on the Peninsula for 35 years. She helped form the Monterey County Symphony Guild and was a board member of the Carmel Music Society, Carmel Bach Festival, Monterey County Symphony and Chamber Music Society.

She was an amateur photographer, interior decorator and performed on the concert stage as a pianist.

Survivors include seven grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. Her husband, Leonard, died in 1983 and her son, Agatin T. Abbott, died in 1975.

Arrangements were under the direction of the Paul Mortuary.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

Charles E. McManus

A Mass of Christian burial took place at St. Bernard's Church in Fitchburg, Mass. for Charles E. McManus, formerly of Pebble Beach, who died Dec. 1 at his home in Fitchburg. He was 77.

Born Nov. 8, 1908 in Fitchburg, he lived intermittently on the Peninsula for several years, following retirement, until April of this year when his health failed. He worked part time at the Antique Clock Shop in New Monterey, owned by his son-in-law and daughter.

He was president and co-owner of the Mallahy Funeral Home in Fitchburg before retiring.

Survivors include his wife Josephine, a daughter, Joan Hittner of Pebble Beach; two sons, Charles and Barry; and a brother, John, all of Fitchburg; nine grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Bishop Timothy J. Harrington officiated at the Mass of Christian burial, which was followed by burial at the St. Bernard's Cemetery.

John S. Mahony

A memorial Mass was celebrated Dec. 18 at the Carmelite Monastery in Carmel for John S. Mahony of Carmel who died Dec. 14 at Community Hospital. He was 68.

Born Nov. 13, 1917 in Chicago, he graduated from the University of Chicago School of Business in 1939. He served with the Army Air Corps in World War II.

He was an executive of General Motors, and later turned to real estate and investments, both in Chicago and on the Monterey Peninsula where he was a resident for 15 years.

He was a former trustee of the Northwood Institute in Midland, Mich., and of the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

He was a past president of the International Wine and Food Society of the Monterey Peninsula, a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Del Monte Beach and Tennis Club and the Navy League of the United States.

Survivors include his wife Mary; daughters, Ann Mahony of San Francisco, Kate Adams of La Jolla and Margaret Peabody of Grosse Pointe, Mich.; a sister, Margaret McCarthy of Greenwich, Conn., and six grandchildren.

Cremation took place under the direction of the Mission Mortuary, followed by inurnment at Calvary Cemetery, Chicago.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Monterey Institute of International Studies or to the Carmelite Monastery.

Marion Heuer

Memorial services took place in Philadelphia for Marion Heuer, who died Dec. 11 at the Evans Residential Care home in Carmel Valley. She was 86.

Born July 15, 1899 in Philadelphia, she graduated from Beaver College and the School of Industrial Arts in Philadelphia, and also attended the Woodmere School of Painting in Philadelphia. She lived in the Chicago area for many years. After moving to the Monterey Peninsula in 1981, she lived at Hacienda Carmel.

As President of Marion Heuer Interiors in Hubbard Woods, Ill., she was a nationally-known interior decorator who created innovative designs for many hotels, restaurants, and homes throughout the Midwest and Florida. She is a former national secretary of the American Association of Interior Designers; in recognition of her services to the profession, she was granted lifetime honorary membership in that organization. She won several national awards for outstanding design.

Survivors include sons Dick of Carmel Valley, Charles of Glenoe, Ill., and daughter Anne of Northbrook, Ill. Eleven grandchildren include Rick and Steve Heuer of Monterey and Carmel Valley, respectively.

Florence Johnson

A memorial service took place Dec. 28 at Carmel Valley Community Chapel for Florence L. Johnson of Carmel Valley who died Dec. 22 at her home. She was 66.

Born Aug. 25, 1919 in Willmar, Minn., she moved to Minneapolis after high school graduation and attended Bethel College. She graduated from the University of Minnesota and Eastern Baptist Seminary in Philadelphia.

She was active in churches in Warrenville and Carbonale, Ill., and in 1957 she moved to Carmel Valley when her husband, The Rev. Donald Johnson, became pastor at Carmel Valley Community Chapel. She started its nursery school in 1961 and was its director for 10 years.

She was president of the Chapel Guild and chairman of Christian education for many years. When she and her husband retired in 1983, the education building was named in her honor.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by three sons, Steven, Marc and Jeff, all of Carmel Valley; a sister, Alice Broberg of Carmel Valley; a brother, Kenneth Dunning of Port Ludlow, Wash.; and four granddaughters.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Carmel Valley Community Chapel.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Our festivities celebrating the arrival of the New Year have their origins in ancient Roman times, when sacrifices were offered to Janus, the deity after whom January is named. Janus was the two-faced god who looked both back toward the past and forward to the future — not a bad rule of thumb for our golden years.

Retired airline pilot Thomas W. "Bill" Tinkler recently took three letters aboard his propeller-driven airplane to carry from Newark, New Jersey to San Francisco. The occasion was the 60th anniversary of through air-mail service from coast to coast. Until 1924, when airport lighting and signal beacons were introduced, the post office could only use planes during the day. The mail was transferred to trains at night. The first through-flight took 34 hours and 6 pilots; Bill spread his reconnection trip over 15 days with 17 stops.

The nation with the longest life expectancy in the world is Iceland, where newborn children can now expect to live 77 years.

Remember When? December 20, 1945—Tire rationing, started because of wartime rubber shortage, came to an end.

N.Y. media mogul has Padre roots

By ANNE PAPINEAU

MANY'S THE present-day Carmelite who once journeyed from some other region, fell in love with the beauty of Carmel and its corner of the sea, and assiduously rearranged life in order to remain here.

Kit Jones is one of those who achieved the opposite.

A resident of New York City since 1965, Jones is in fact a Carmel High graduate (class of '58). Bitten by the drama bug when he was a high school sophomore, Jones participated any way he could in a host of community theater productions, serving as actor, lighting technician or property artist.

ARTS & LEISURE

Jones love of theater never deserted him. These days he is president of the New York-based Brainstorm Productions, a film, video and multi-image production company. The client list for Brainstorm Productions resembles a who's who of Fortune 500 companies: AT&T, Sony, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Merrill Lynch — and the list continues.

The vice president of Brainstorm is Jones' wife, Madelon. Together they direct a company that produces corporate communications and training films, presentations for promotions and sales meetings and films for internal communications.

"Carmel is actually a good proving ground," noted Jones during a stay with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Jones of Carmel. "You'd be surprised how easy the transition was to New York. Carmel has a sense of sophistication, it's the nature of the people who live here. I think it would have been much harder coming from Paducah."

Jones remembers well his initiation into the world of show people.

"A girl I was interested in told me she was going to try out for a play at the Wharf

A, HATED Kit Jones (center) supervises production of a film for the U.S. Shoe Corporation. The Carmel High School graduate's Brainstorm Productions, Inc. of

New York City has won more than 36 industry awards in its eight-year history.

Theater. I told the director I would be interested in doing props for the show. Well — she never showed up, but I stuck with it."

Jones went on to work both before and behind the footlights at such peninsula theaters as the Golden Bough, Forest and California's First. A recent Cherry Foundation column printed in the Carmel Pine Cone credited Jones with working the lights for the Cherry Foundation production of Second Shepherd's Play, staged Christmas 1956 and 1957.

"It was delightful," is Jones' memory of his high school years.

"There wasn't a big drama department at the time. The senior play was, I believe, Blithe Spirit," Jones recalled. "I can't say that I have any major Carmel High School memories other than I took my senior finals a week early so I could see the Ashland Shakespeare Festival. I was there as a spear carrier. That was my first real taste of the real thing."

Ever bewitched by drama, Jones majored in theater at UCLA.

"My work in Carmel was as an actor. In college I shifted over to writing. I wrote plays, screenplays, teleplays and finally got into the corporate communications area," he said.

Newly graduated from UCLA, Jones made his move on the Big Apple. He wrote screenplays, supplementing his writing income by doing carpentry work.

"I was attempting to peddle my wares," Jones quipped. "I had an agent, Flora Roberts. She also handled Stephen Sondheim and worked with Elia Kazan and Hal Prince."

The field of advertising beckoned, and it was while working at an advertising agency in New York that Jones formed a production company. With his partner, Jones co-produced radio and television commercials and documentary films. But this working team was to dissolve because "His heart was really in advertising. My heart was in more theatrically-oriented work," Jones said.

Thus, eight years ago, Brainstorm Productions was born.

"It's constantly remarkable," is Jones' assessment of working with corporate America.

"We completed a large project for Merck & Co., and they were a dream. It was like working for your best friends. I've had some others who were absolutely unhelpful. They sort of expect you to go out and get 'Academy Award-winning' corporate films with absolutely no assistance. My wife says you have to be insane to go into this business."

"I wouldn't do it if I didn't enjoy the work," Jones added.

Jones will have an opportunity to reassert his theatrical leanings as he prepares a one-man show for Academy Award-winner F. Murray Abraham, the actor who portrayed Mozart's rival composer Salieri in the film, Amadeus.

"I can't say that I have any major Carmel High School memories other than I took my senior finals a week early so I could see the Ashland Shakespeare Festival. I was there as a spear carrier. That was my first real taste of the real thing."

"It hasn't a title yet, but I'm writing some of the pieces and also helping compile materials from a variety of areas that have something of a religious theme. Abraham will be doing a broad array of pieces, and the first presentation will be at Baruch College, Manhattan, the latter part of February."

"Murray ran into a woman at Loyola College some years back who told him there was a Franciscan brother named J. Murray Abraham who worked in Calcutta. Murray contacted him, and part of what I'm writing is a piece on Father Abraham that he can present."

theatrical experience in Monterey Peninsula community theater in the late '50s, is now president of a film and video production company headquartered in New York. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Jones, still reside in Carmel.

The Brass Band blends slapstick with its music

RESEMBLING AT times the Chicago Symphony, Harlem Globetrotters and Monty Python sharing the same stage, The Brass Band returns to Sunset Theater in Carmel, Saturday, Jan. 11.

One critic called The Brass Band "The best thing since bottled peanut butter," an apt description of these five classically trained musicians capable of making fine music while mugging athletically and shamelessly.

The five brass players who make up the ensemble are Johannes Mager, George Wallace, Bob Jennings, Bob Leach and Jim Aron. The group was formed in 1971 for the Charles Dickens Christmas Faire in San Francisco, where they improvised comedy in the guise of an old English street band.

Since then The Brass Band has performed the world over, garnering the Perrier Award in 1984 at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe in Scotland.

A typical performance by The Brass Band might embrace The Saber Dance, Onward Christian Soldiers, Flight of the Bumblebee, Rhapsody in Blue, Thus Spake Zarathustra and The Teddy Bears' Picnic.

The Carmel concert will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 and $10. For reservations, contact the director's office at Sunset Center, 624-3996, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Sunset Theater is on San Carlos Street near Ninth Avenue.

Poet Robert Bly will read at college from his works

ROBERT BLY, recipient of a National Book Award and a leading figure in contemporary American poetry, will conduct a weekend of writing and study, "The Love of Minute Particulars," at Asilomar Conference Center in Pacific Grove, under sponsorship of the San Jose Poetry Center.

At 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11, Bly will read from his work in the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall. His reading is sponsored jointly by the poetry center and the MPC English Department. Admission is $4.

Of his Asilomar program, planned Friday through Sunday, Jan. 10-12, Bly wrote, "During this weekend we will go over the poems of Antonio Machado. Machado emphasizes the importance of bringing together the inner and outer worlds in working against what we now call narcissism. We will do several writing exercises each day, concentrating on minute particulars. No previous experience in poetry or prose writing is required. We will spend one afternoon in the Point Lobos area."

For off-grounds participants who will not stay at Asilomar and will provide their own meals, the fee is $135 general; $120 to San Jose Poetry Center members. The regular seminar fee is $190 general, $175 to poetry center members, and includes room and board. To make reservations, call 354-1353 or 277-2834.

Bly is author of eight major books of poetry, most recently "Loving a Woman in Two Worlds." His seven volumes of translations include "Times Alone: Selected Poems of Antonio Machado," the work of other Spanish poets and of Latin American, German, Scandinavian, Persian and Hindu poets.

It was Bly, in fact, who first brought the great Latin American poets Neruda and Vallejo to the attention of American readers. His books of essays, interviews and scholarship and his anthologies have widely influenced young poets since he founded the much-discussed journal "The Fifties," known subsequently as "The Sixties," "The Seventies," and now "The Eighties," which he still edits.

Bly has conducted seminars and study tours for the C.G. Jung Institutes of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Notre Dame and New York and for colleges and universities.

Kit Jones has N.Y. 'Brainstorm'

According to Jones, he still strives to polish his writing, mentally juggling a variety of projects. Also never far from his thoughts, he added, are his memories of Carmel.

"I think fondly of Carmel quite often. I'm equally happy in the East having discovered the seasons. Carmel has about one and one-half seasons, which is very nice. I'm also very fond of the four seasons."

Jones resides in a loft in Soho in New York City, but he and his wife also keep a 45-acre farm in Sullivan County, about two hours outside of Manhattan.

"The only cultural events out on the farm are church suppers and fireman's dinners.

Hypertension management taught at hospital

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will offer a three-hour class on hypertension management Saturday, Feb. 1, called "The Ups and Downs of Blood Pressure: Keeping It Healthy."

If you or a family member are under medical treatment for high blood pressure, you can learn the positive effects of good nutrition, exercise and stress reduction, said Patient Educator Cindy Onufer.

If your doctor recommends taking your blood pressure at home, the class will provide instruction in blood pressure monitoring. Participants may have their own equipment checked for calibration. Pre-registration is required by Jan. 15, and there is a $15 fee.

To pre-register, contact Onufer at 624-5311.

Academy will stage Cole Porter's 'Heaven Sent'

AN ENSEMBLE of local performers will back up comedic veterans Jo Anne Worley and Roger Perry in the Cole Porter musical, Heaven Sent.

This production of the Frohman Academy for Musical Theatre Education and The American Musical Theatre Festival, Inc., opens Friday, Jan. 10 in the main theater at Monterey Peninsula College.

From This Moment On is among the Porter tunes that distinguish Heaven Sent, termed a "romantic romp" by Frohman Academy Executive Director Mikel Pippi.

The premiere performance will serve as a benefit for the Frohman Academy Scholarship Fund. Opening night admission is $11.50 general. Persons who contribute $25 or more will be admitted to both the show and the cast party in the Ferrante Room of the Monterey Sheraton immediately following the performance. Party-goers will be able to meet the Heaven Sent cast members, including Jo Anne Worley and Roger Perry.

The Sidney Frohman Jr. Foundation for the Performing Arts is a non-profit organization established by the late Sidney Frohman Jr., a Carmel Valley resident for the last 20 years of his life, to fund a theater training school on the peninsula.

Opened in October 1983, the Academy operates a county-wide Artist-in-the-Schools program which provides an introduction to musical theater free of charge to students in local elementary and secondary schools. It also offers instruction in several performing disciplines.

Heaven Sent co-star Jo Anne Worley has performed in all facets of the entertainment industry, including television, nightclubs and theater. She starred in the original Laugh-In television show, and more recently has logged appearances on Love Boat and Murder, She Wrote.

On stage, she starred in national companies of several musicals, including Carnival, Mame and Hello, Dolly. Her starring role as Mama Rose in Gypsy garnered for her a Los Angeles Drama-Logue Award. She recently created the role of Boris Pronin in The Beautiful Lady at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles.

Roger Perry has starred in hundreds of television episodes and movies of the week since he was discovered by Lucille Ball and put under contract to her Desilu Studios. He can currently be seen as Councilman Costello in Falcon Crest and as Mr. Parker, the Headmaster, in the series Facts of Life. His stage credits include productions of Once Upon a Mattress, Anything Goes and Gypsy.

Local cast in this musical comedy based on Cole Porter's 1953 musical, Out of This World, are Leila Knight, Larry Ayo, Robert Basgall, Vince Salazar and Karen Ankenman.

The show's chorus of gods and goddesses from Mount Olympus is composed of Cameron Bowen, Kelvin Wright, Michael Pina, Kevin Botelho, Howard Hinkley, Sam Miller, Phyllis Lewis, Leslie Sturges, Paulette Dittinger, Gwenda Noble, Tiffany Wheeler, Lola Wyckoff, Betka Guilford-Castro and Eleanor Wylde.

Choreography is by Gloria Elber, with set and lighting designs by George Gizienski. Nick Williams serves as musical director, and Frank Quilantang designed the costumes.

Heaven Sent is co-written by Lawrence

Kasha and David Landay. Kasha originally produced the show with Pippi in Los Angeles in 1978, and the Monterey production marks its second staging.

Donations made above the $11.50 admission price on opening night are tax-deductible. Donations are matched in-kind by the Patricia Smith Ramsey Scholarship Fund. The Carmel Highlands attorney contributed $50,000 to The Frohman Academy to establish a matching grant fund.

Heaven Sent will run Thursdays through Sundays until Feb. 2. Reservations can be made by calling 649-5561.

JO ANNE WORLEY, purveyor of "chicken jokes" on the original Laugh-In television show and Roger Perry, a regular on the television series Facts of Life and Falcon Crest, will perform in Heaven Sent, staged in the Monterey Peninsula College main theater.

Crest, will perform in Heaven Sent, staged in the Monterey Peninsula College main theater.

Salinas forum focuses on Alzheimer's Disease

John Steinbeck Library will co-sponsor "Alzheimer's and the Alliance on Aging Disease — Everything You Friendly Visitor's Program Always Wanted to Know But Were Afraid to Ask" at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 15 in the John Steinbeck Library meeting room.

The free program will feature Wayne Lavengood, coordinator of Geriatric Services at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. Lavengood will discuss Alzheimer's Disease, a disease that until a few years ago most people had never heard of.

Only recently has it been recognized as the most common cause of memory loss and disorientation in the elderly; but, as yet, scientists have been able to discover neither a cause nor a cure for this disease. Lavengood will try to answer questions regarding symptoms, expectations, possibilities for living as full a life as possible, and any other concerns people might have.

Evenings of fashion, dance offer glimpses at trends

FEEL A little nostalgic for the jitterbug? Or was the renaissance era more in tune to your dance step? Well, put on your zoot suit, or mini skirt, lace up the saddle shoes, adjust the Empress Eugenie hat and stroll down to Sunset Center next week.

Nearly 100 students will stage two productions of Retrospect, a dance and fashion show extravaganza, Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 15 and 16. Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. and admission to the one-hour show is a $2.50 donation.

Students in the Carmel High School dance class will present a retrospective view of dance through a series of numbers that include renaissance and African stylings, as well as a musical skit on 20th century women at work.

The modeling show will be presented by the Regional Occupational Program (ROP) offered at Carmel High School, but it also is attended by students from Pacific Grove, Seaside and Monterey high schools.

In addition, the dance and fashion students will offer a peek at the future clothes and moves of the 21st century.

Supervisors for the show are fashion teacher Robyn Schott and dance instructor Marikay LeValley.

Fashions will be provided by Dress For Less, Reincarnation, Second Hand Rose and the Clothes Closet.

Proceeds from the show will benefit school dance and fashion programs.

Books by Mail service initiated

The Monterey County Library has received a grant from the California State Library, under the auspices of the Library Services and Construction Act, to initiate a Books by Mail service.

This program was developed in response to requests for services from residents of geographically remote areas of the county, not presently served by the Bookmobile or any other library facility.

Books by Mail will also provide recreational reading materials to the inmates of the California Training Facility at Soledad.

Participants in this program will be able to choose books from an annotated catalog, which will be released in the early spring, as well as from the entire county library collection. A reference service by mail will also be available to those who need specific information.

Anne Petersen Burk has been appointed librarian for the Books by Mail program. If you live in a geographically remote area of Monterey County or if you are a homebound or disabled person not served by a library outreach volunteer, call 424-3244, or write to Books by Mail, Monterey County Library, 26 Central Ave., Salinas, 93901, to register for this service.

READY FOR the dance and fashion extravaganza Retrospect are Carmel High School students (from left) Michael Maloney, Wendy Dean, Aimee Alling and Celine Allouchery. Retrospect will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 15 and 16 at Sunset Center. Admission is $2.50.

Heaven Sent

Jo Anne Worley and Roger Perry co-star in Heaven Sent, the Cole Porter musical that features such tunes as "From This Moment On."

Produced by The Frohman Academy for Musical Theatre Education and The American Musical Theatre Festival, Inc., Heaven Sent opens Friday, Jan. 10 in the main theater at Monterey Peninsula College.

Heaven Sent plays 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays, plus 2 and 7:30 p.m. Sundays until Feb. 2.

The opening night performance will benefit the Frohman Academy scholarship fund. Premiere tickets are $25, which includes cast party admission; $11.50 general and $8.50 for senior citizens, active and retired military and their dependents and students through high school age. Tickets to the other performances range from $4.50 to $11.50. Group rate information is available by calling 372-6866.

The Monterey Peninsula College Theatre is at 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey. Reservations: 649-5561.

Greater Tuna

John Jay Espino and Jonathan Seydel return in their presentation of the comedy Greater Tuna.

Each actor portrays 10 characters in this show about the citizens of the small town of Tuna, Texas. Greater Tuna plays at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 10 only at Sherwood Hall, 940 N. Main St., Salinas. The 9:30 p.m. show is a cocktail show. No one under 21 will be admitted. Tickets are $7.75. Tickets can be ordered through BASS and Ticketron outlets or by calling 758-7477.

Olio Revue

The Troupers of the Gold Coast will again stage their old-time song and dance revue at California's First Theatre.

The annual Olio Revue plays at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays at the oldest theater in the state, Scott and Pacific streets in Monterey.

Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and teens and $3 for children 12 and younger. For information, call 375-4916 between 1 and 5 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays and 1 p.m. until showtime on Fridays and Saturdays.

The Fourposter

Thirty-five years of marriage are chronicled in Jan de Hartog's The Fourposter. The comedy continues at the Studio Theatre Restaurant in Carmel.

The Fourposter plays Thursdays through Sundays at the dinner theater on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. Dinner is served at 7 p.m. with curtain at 8:30. Times are one hour earlier on Sundays.

Dinner and show price is $24.50 per person. Senior citizen, military and student discounts are available on Sundays. Information: 624-1661.

ROUNDUP

Ophuls film, comedy screened

Stranger Than Paradise and Lola Montes are the upcoming offerings of the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

A road movie replete with deadpan humor, Stranger Than Paradise tells of a 16-year-old Hungarian girl who visits her cousin in New York. Together they become the world's worst tourists.

Jim Jarmusch directs this comedy, shown Friday through Sunday, Jan. 10-12.

Starring Oskar Werner and Peter Ustinov, Lola Montes is the last film of Max Ophuls. Montes was a celebrated 19th century courtesan who counted kings, nobles and Franz Liszt among her followers. The 1955 production, in French with subtitles, is noted for its opulence and elegance. Lola Montes will be shown Wednesday, Jan. 15.

All films begin at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Tickets are $3.50 general, $3 students, $2.75 senior citizens and $2 for film society members. For details, call 659-4795 between 5 p.m. and show time.

Guinness stars in 'The Prisoner'

The Alec Guinness Film Festival continues at Sunset Theater in Carmel with the Tuesday, Jan. 14 screening of The Prisoner.

The Prisoner presents a parallel to the Cardinal Midzenty incident in which a popular cardinal is arrested and accused of attacking the state. The inquisitor, played by Jack Hawkins, acts the part of father, brother, friend, confessor, comforter and accuser of the cardinal until Guinness eventually breaks, giving a false confession of guilt.

The Prisoner begins at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.50. Sunset Theater is on San Carlos at Ninth in Carmel.

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY JANE WILGRESS

Looking backward

IN THIS year of 1986 the Cherry Foundation will attain the great age of 38, and it will be 22 years since Jeanne Cherry's death — an event which resulted in the closure of the place during the long litigation over her estate. It is a wonder, I think, that we have survived at all without the endowment which Jeanne intended for the foundation.

I have recently been re-reading some often-hilarious correspondence between myself and George White, Carl and Jeanne's lawyer and secretary of the foundation's board of directors. The letters start in 1976 and run until George's death in 1981. They make clear that, while I was always answerable to the board which would hold tightly to the purse strings, I was to be paid and could live here as much as I liked and was to have a pretty much free hand in what I did. And it was soon apparent to me that convivial, self-sustaining activity in learning and in the fine and live arts could be generated without money if one made decisions based on the creative spirit which was manifestly here, defined rules and regulations being secondary — though I did immediately, out of necessity, establish a few of these because I had come in on a situation in which the foundation was reopened but not cared for.

On the whole, George White seems to have approved of my modus operandi, but I did not always approve of his, and we had quite a few acrimonious exchanges by letter while I was expending efforts to build a more realistic and friendly relationship between the Cherry Foundation Board and the public, some members of which were challenging his record without knowing all the facts.

LOOKING FORWARD

After which bit of ancient history, I will tell about present and future happenings. Jaya Karls is returning to teach a new series of yoga classes, starting Friday, Jan. 10. For more information call Jaya at 659-5162. The following day, Saturday, Jan. 11, the first meeting of a Great Books study group will be held, starting at 10 a.m. in the gallery. There is still room to enroll in this group, which will be led by Marilyn Sanders, and anyone interested is welcome to attend this first meeting.

Then, the Monterey Peninsula Waldorf School study group is meeting here the first and third Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the gallery. And on Thursday, Jan. 23 we will welcome the return of Rick and Lorraine Lee, folk musicians from New England.

Duo will introduce yoga, cellular memory courses

'YOGA FOR Sensational Sitting' and 'Accessing Your Cellular Memories' are the subjects of free classes offered Monday, Jan. 13 at Sunset Center, Carmel. Both sessions will be held in the Babcock Room. The yoga class begins at 6:30 p.m. and the cellular memory class at 8 p.m.

Easy yoga stretches and breathing methods for avoiding and releasing tension while sitting at a desk, on a plane, in a meeting, or at the wheel of a car will be demonstrated by instructor Phyllis Haffner in the 6:30 p.m. class. Participants will learn simple techniques to prevent and relieve headaches, back strain, tired legs and feet, abdominal discomfort and drowsiness, Haffner said.

"You can be more alert, more effective, and more comfortable in all sorts of situations — even where you feel 'trapped' and tired to the point of numbness or pain," she noted.

The yoga demonstration is offered as an inspiration to everyone to pursue a fitness or stress-related program and as an introduction to a six-week series of yoga classes beginning at Sunset Center Jan. 20. Both beginners and experienced students are invited to attend.

How to access and use cellular memories — the knowledge of the body — to remove blocks to energy and creativity will be discussed by instructors Raye Allan and Phyllis Haffner in the 8 p.m. class.

The lecture is an introduction to a six-week series of workshops which combine ancient yoga relaxation and breathing practices with modern methods of stress-reduction and principles of psychosomatic therapy. Explanation of the cellular memory concept and the accessing process will be followed by a brief experiential session of progressive relaxation and guided visualization.

Raye Allan is a Monterey counselor whose studies in biofeedback led her to an interest in ancient Eastern techniques which achieve similar results.

Haffner has conducted yoga classes at Sunset Center since moving to the peninsula from Cincinnati in 1984. Her efforts to bring yoga into the lives of busy people stem from her own experience of fitting yoga into crowded days as a university instructor of political science and economics and as a personal growth workshops coordinator. Allan and Haffner currently are co-authoring a book on cellular memory.

For more information, call 373-7968. Reservations are accepted but not required.

PHYLLIS HAFFNER demonstrates the "Instant Invigorator" stretch; one of several stress-reduction techniques she will explain Monday, Jan. 13 at Sunset Center in Carmel.

Elks Lodge sponsors student essay contest

The Monterey Elks Lodge No. 1285 has invited all sixth grade students on the peninsula to enter an essay contest. The theme is "Why We Should Honor Our Flag."

The Monterey Elks Lodge will award $25 to each of three boys and three girls whose essays are selected as winners.

This is part of the statewide contest sponsored by the California/Hawaii Elks Association. The winners at the state level will be invited to the State Elks Convention, to be held in Long Beach during May, to receive their awards.

Judges for the local contest will be composed of a committee of local citizens.

All entries must be received by the Committee of the Monterey Elks Lodge No. 1285, 150 Mar Vista Drive, Monterey, 93940, by Jan. 10.

Women's History Week planned

The YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula will have its first "planning meeting" for National Women's History Week Thursday, Jan. 9 at the YWCA of the Monterey Peninsula, 404 Camino El Estero, Monterey.

All women and organizations interested in contributing to this event are invited to participate. The group will meet from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. For details, call Carol Donald at 649-0834.

Seminar analyzes goal-setting

A seminar that stresses the importance of short- and long-range planning and demystifies the process of setting group goals and objectives will be offered Jan. 11.

The seminar, titled "Where Are We Going?," will meet 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Monterey County SPCA. Workshop leader is Kip Hudson, a UC Berkeley graduate who has presented several workshops on management. The program is sponsored by the Monterey County Cultural Council, Volunteer Center of Salinas and Volunteers in Action.

Workshop fee is $25 and registration is required. For complete information, call 646-4251.

Course studies exercise physiology

Certified exercise specialist Claudia Sawyer will lead a four-week introductory class in basic exercise physiology and methods of physical fitness testing.

Fee is $5 for the class, to be taught at Monterey Peninsula College through Jan. 30. One unit of college credit will be offered. For additional information, contact Claudia Sawyer in the Physical Education Department at MPC.

Coronary, diabetes groups meet

Pacific Grove psychologist Rona Halpern will address a combined meeting of the Community Coronary Club and the Diabetes Support Group.

"Stress: Taking Control of Your Life" will be her subject. Heart and diabetes patients, their friends and family members are invited to attend.

The session is free, but seating is limited. It will be offered 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 13 in the Main Conference Room at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. For more information, call Cardiac Wellness Coordinator Martha Kennifer at 625-4934.

Bilingual exhibit reveals children's view of Mexico

"Mexico as Seen by Her Children/Mexico Visto Por Sus Ninos" is the theme of a bilingual exhibit featuring 60 paintings and poems by Mexican children. It can be viewed at The Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center, Carmel, Monday, Jan. 13 through Feb. 5.

Organized jointly by the National Foundation for the Improvement of Education (NFIE) and the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES), the exhibition serves to enhance intercultural understanding of children in the United States as they become acquainted with the Mexican child's view of the world.

The exhibit presents the child's interpretation of Mexico's colonial and modern history and customs, Mexico's neighbors, its landscape and industry, scenes from the villages and countryside, the charro, bullfights, fiesta and fantasy.

Recalling a bullfight, a child writes, "The bull was furious, his roar most ominous; the torero so courteous...the day was luminous...he waved so chivalrous; the bull got dangerous and gored him serious; the crowd made such a fuss, they removed him oblivious!"

This choice of imagery by children ages 3 to 16 from all parts of Mexico offers the viewer a fresh understanding of Mexican children, their country and heritage and what it means to be Mexican.

An extensive arts program, developed through the efforts of the Mexican government with support from private corporations, resulted in publication of Spanish and English versions of the book, "Mexico As Seen by Her Children/Mexico Visto Por Sus Ninos."

Sunset Center is on San Carlos Street near Ninth Avenue, Carmel. The gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and one hour before a performance in Sunset Theater.

Logo sought for local film fest

The inaugural Monterey Film Festival, set for February, is in need of a logo design to bolster its promotional efforts. The advisory committee is looking for local talent to fill this request.

Specific requirements of the logo design are that it be one color so that it may be easily used on letterhead, tickets, advertising, etc. The logo may or may not include lettering for the title, "Monterey Film Festival."

The committee hopes to find a graphic image that combines "an exciting array of films, surrounded by the glitter and glamour of 'tinseltown' celebrities, while also capturing the beauty that typifies the Monterey Peninsula and Monterey County."

Deadline for submittal of a logo design is Jan. 15. Interested parties should deliver artwork and bid to the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce office, 380 Alvarado St., Monterey, attention: Julie Fiedler.

Hatha yoga taught at Cherry

Jaya Karls will teach two six-week hatha yoga courses at the Cherry Foundation in Carmel. Classes will meet Friday mornings beginning Jan. 10.

The intermediate class will run from 9 to 10 a.m. and the beginning from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. The sessions will include exercise, relaxation, diet, breathing and meditation. Fee for the six weeks is $30.

Karls has studied and taught yoga for 14 years and has served in many American and Canadian ashrams (retreats) and yoga centers. She is also a practicing physiotherapist, a natural therapeutics specialist, and a vegetarian cooking instructor.

For more information and to reserve a space call the foundation at 624-7491.

Weil paintings shown in Carmel

WATERCOLORS AND oil paintings by Sally Weil are exhibited at Great Western Savings, Seventh Avenue and Dolores Street, Carmel. A resident of both San Francisco and Carmel, Weil has shown her paintings in the galleries of the Society of Western Artists, Marin and Belvedere art societies and the Central Coast Art Association.

Betty Barron oil paintings convey international scenes

Carmel artist Betty Barron will present a one-woman show of her oil paintings in the Sunset Theater foyer during the month of January.

This current exhibit, her second at Sunset Center, is a retrospective entitled "Castles and Cathedrals...Missions. Mosques and Minarets." Included are world-famous locales as well as historical and sylvan scenes of California.

A resident of Carmel since 1949, Betty Barron spent many years as a society writer for a local newspaper and magazine and was a travel writer on a national level.

Formerly with a classical radio station in San Francisco, an editor of flight manuals for Douglas Publications, a newscaster for the U.S. Office of War Information and speech writer for the chancellor of UCLA, she was a "weekend painter" until 20 years ago. Now she is combining painting with travel and travel writing.

After touring Europe, Brazil, Russia, Mexico, Hong Kong and Thailand, and studying at the Kona Art Center, Hawaii, as well as an entire summer in England, Ireland and Scotland, she returned to Carmel and began painting all day — every day.

She has studied drawing at the University of Minnesota and life drawing with Keith Lindberg, a nationally known local artist. She also studied oil painting with artist Jack Laycox at Studio 15 in the Sunset Center.

The theater foyer is open by arrangement with the director's office at Sunset Center. There is no admission fee.

Film spotlights radio comedians

The Great Radio Comedians, an award-winning film that recalls such comic stars as Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Fanny Brice, Eddie Cantor and Fred Allen, is the Thursday, Jan. 16 Brown Bag Cinema selection.

Admission is free to Brown Bag Cinema, which commences at noon with serving of free coffee on the terrace outside the Chapman Room at Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Patrons are invited to bring their lunches and join the other filmgoers.

The Great Radio Comedians will be screened at 1 p.m. in Sunset Theater. For details, call 624-3996.

Welles's 'The Third Man' screened

Orson Welles and Joseph Cotten co-star in the 1949 film, The Third Man. It will be screened at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 10 at the Carmel Valley Library, 65 W. Carmel Valley Road at the entrance to the Village, Carmel Valley.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children. For show details, call 659-2377.

"I don't know anything about art, I just know what I like." You've probably heard it—or even said it—many times yourself, and we're the first to agree it's the way art should be. Because at GWS Galleries, we believe art should be an experience and the experience should be a pleasure.

So we offer you the finest in wildlife, aviation, nautical, landscape, seascape, Western and Americana art by a group of the finest contemporary American artists, in a setting as comfortable as your home. And we offer you that art at a range of affordable prices, whether your interests are in original paintings, sculpture, fine art prints, posters or fine art books.

Of course if you do want to know more about art, we'll be happy to help. We'll take the time to answer your questions and share our knowledge about the kind of art we know and love best. So come visit us at GWS Galleries soon. We'll help you experience art the way art should be experienced. And we'll make that experience a pleasure.

Bookmobile needs artist's eye

On Jan. 15 the Monterey Public Library will open its "Designs on the Bookmobile" competition, in which contestants will submit artwork to be used for decorating the new bookmobile. One entry will be selected for reproduction on the vehicle by a professional sign painter. The winner will also receive a $100 U.S. Savings Bond from the Monterey Public Library League.

Deadline for entry is March 30. Entry forms and rules may be picked up at the library and at most local artists' supply stores.

The walking town . . .

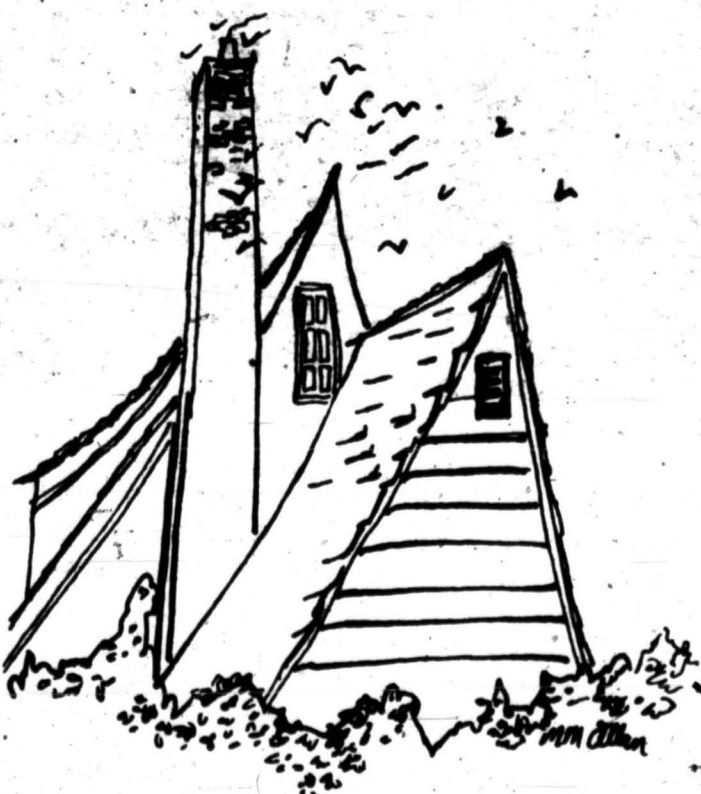

A friend of ours who lives on Carmel Point is fond of saying, "More people walk by my house than drive by." Many people in Carmel can say that. It's a walking town. People stop and chat. They see things — flowers, a new gate, fresh paint. They're in no hurry, because one of the best things we have here is time.

The way to learn about Carmel is to walk it. Not just your own neighborhood, but the unfamiliar streets, ways and lanes. Drive, if you must, to a different area; then park and strike out for a few blocks of intimate sightseeing. You'll find things you never knew were there!

A riot of begonias near the end of Monte Verde. A second story grapestake fence on Ocean View. A garage atop a house on upper San Carlos, and another on San Mateo Avenue, and still another on Pescadero.

Some day we're going to count the turrets in Carmel . . . and the adobes. There's a burro lives in front of an adobe on Atherton Road near Rio. The Little House on Lobos Street lives up to its name. And the highest house in Carmel, we think, is Casa de Juniper on San Pedro Lane. Odd how it hugs the ground.

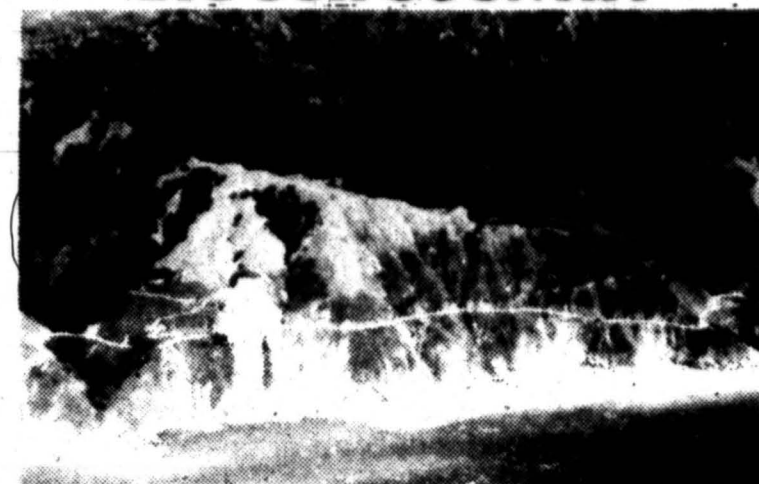

In our business we spend a lot of time learning the town. So if you want a quaint cottage in Carmel Woods . . . or a beach house on the ocean . . . or two acres and a manor not 10 minutes walk from downtown, we know where they are. And they really are available from time to time. For instance — but no, that one is taken.

Put in your order early. We're expecting the new Spring line any day now. Call 624-1838.

UPPER PARTINGTON RIDGE AMID MAJESTIC BIG SUR COUNTRY

This remote, magical hideaway, built by the famous Big Sur character, Jaime deAngulo, lies near the top of the Partington Ridge, about 30 air miles south of Carmel. The land, comprising 3 separate parcels totalling 60 acres, adjoins Los Padres National Forest on the north. Its altitude, 1400-1600' above sea level, places the property above the coastal fog line. Access is via a 3-miles country road; the first mile from the Scenic Highway is paved.

The principal residence rests among trees in a grassy glade. Building materials were packed in before the Scenic Highway was completed. Architecturally unique, the walls are rough textured 8" thick concrete. Colorful vines and flowers climb over the shake roof, enhancing the beauty of the 1,100 sq. ft. home consisting of a kitchen/dining living room, two bedrooms and bath, all with redwood plank ceilings and heavy exposed beams. Additional buildings include a guest house and several other cabins and studios. Utilities include Pacific Telephone, PG&E power and a private water system.

The living area centers on the unusual rounded fireplace pictured above. Similar fireplaces warm the tile-floored bathroom, both bedrooms, and the guest house. Recently installed skylights add cheerful light; Dutch doors of Heavy redwood open to lawns and garden.

The dining area, opening to the garden through wood frame windows, is conveniently served from the nearby kitchen. The thick walls, heavy beams, artistic fireplaces and handcrafted doors combine to make this rustic structure an especially appealing Big Sur home. The sunny, southerly exposure, sound of the surf, forests of madrone, redwood, oak and bay, outlooks to the Pacific Ocean, Sur Coastline and Santa Lucia Mountains create a special Big Sur Paradise.
